Says Borah to Smith.
Two Girls, and a Moral.
Nudist Wedding, Very Old.
What Good Is Science.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 27.

SENATOR BORAH rejects Gov. Smith's criticism of what Mr. Smith calls President Roosevelt's "baloney dollars."

The Idaho Senator says the President's gold buying is sound. He lives in the West among farmers where money is scarce. Alfred E. Smith lives in New York, where they have about all the money there is.

SENATOR BORAH says:

"The gold dollar is the most dishonest dollar ever created, except absolutely irredeemable paper money."

A practical answer to criticism of President Roosevelt comes from the Department of Commerce, showing that the outside world is using our cheaper dollars to buy goods, thus giving employment to American workmen. Our exports in October were at their highest point since 1931.

IN QUEEN VICTORIA'S day a beautiful young girl lived in England, named Mary Lloyd. Great artists painted her pictures. They appear in the great museums. Now Mary Lloyd, 60 years old, makes a poor living, sewing, scrubbing, working at menial odd jobs.

When Mary Lloyd was born in England, 60 years ago, Marie Dressler was born in this country. Marie Dressler was a very good looking girl but no raving beauty like Mary Lloyd.

For that reason Marie Dressler worked hard, thought hard, and studied. Now at 60 she earns $5,000 a week, or more, in moving pictures and enjoys herself.

Moral: Cultivate the inside of your head as well as the outside of your face.

STRANGE ITEMS in the news. A scientific observatory is built on Mt. Sinai, where Moses received the Ten Commandments from the Lord, who came down, personally, to deliver them.

The Smithsonian Institution, building the observatory, picked out Mt. Sinai as the highest, absolutely dry spot in the Eastern Hemisphere. Its purpose is to measure heat from the sun.

A NEWS item describes a "nudist wedding" in California. The bride and bridegroom, clergyman, best man, attendants and audience all wore no clothes.

The "nudist wedding" is not new, for through millions of years monkey weddings have been run on the same basis, except that the monkeys, having a decent coat of fur, were not really nude. Such incidents show that what we call civilization has not sunk in far.

"Scratch a Russian, you find a Tartar."

Russians might reply:

TO THE FOOLISH old question "of what practical use is all your science," many answers are given, as:

"You won't waste money boring for coal once you know that it is never found below a certain formation, or waste time digging for water when you know it is not found below granite."

That has to do a little with geology.

A little knowledge of physics would have helped Sam Olson, of South Dakota, who filled a bottle full of coffee and heated it on the stove, cutting his face and hands badly when the bottle exploded.

A little knowledge about expansion caused by heat and steam would have protected him.

THE ABLE Russian, Litvinoff, his work done here, sails back to Russia, leaving this friendly message:

"Russia is like a man who has found a friend who has been lost for many years. I hope we will never lose our friend again."

Common sense in this country replies:

"The same to you."

IN CHICAGO'S "operating table murder," the dead woman's mother-in-law, Mrs. Wynekoop, a doctor, confessed that she did the killing. Now her son, Earle, says he was the murderer, and his mother confessed the crime only to save him. The double confession puzzles police and may make conviction difficult if mother and son stick to stories told.

Chicago has not had this kind of a murder before. It may bring Clarence Darrow from retirement.

THE GERMAN brand of Fascism, established by Hitler, spreading to Belgium, starts as usual.

Joris Van Severen gathers young men, gives each a green uniform, military cap, tunic, riding breeches and leggings, and starts the "Union of Duch National Solidarists."

Shortened to "Dinasos," the young gentlemen who feel that riding breeches and leggings help them, even when they have no horses, don't want kings, Free Masons, bankers, Socialist political parties or private property.

This doesn't leave much except the riding breeches and leggings.

THE UNEXPECTED is hard to deal with. Kenneth Meeker, of Montana, whose business is catching rattlesnakes, shipped one hundred big ones this summer to the Chicago exposition.

His friends, hearing him yell for help in a distant field, said:

"Some rattler has got him at last."

WAITRESSES' JOBS HELD SAFE

Distilleries Granted More Time to File Reports

By WILLIAM J. KELLY
International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 27.—Determined to enact adequate liquor control laws during this last week before official repeal, legislative leaders adopted unusual procedures today to get Gov. Gifford Pinchot's program on his desk Wednesday and adjourn for Thanksgiving.

To accomplish this feat, they decided to suspend the rules of the Senate tonight to permit final passage of the Scott control board bill. Then it is planned to relay it to the House, where it will be pushed through first reading by a similar suspension of the rules.

It is understood the Scott bill will be amended so that the Governor will be unable to dismiss any of the three board members without the consent of the Senate.

WAITRESS BAN UNLIKELY

The McClure liquor control bill when, and if, enacted probably will not prohibit women from serving drinks in hotels, restaurants, clubs and other retail establishments, it developed today.

3D VOTE FRAUD TRIAL OPENS

Four of five defendants in the government's third vote fraud prosecution went on trial in Federal Court today before 12 men drawn from a new panel of jurors.

The old panel which supplied the "disagreeing" juries in the first two fraud cases had been dismissed. Today's jury had only three members from Allegheny County.

One of the defendants, Mike Spada, has not been apprehended, the court was informed when the case was called.

Another defendant, Ralph Gentile suffering from a broken knee cap, was brought into the courtroom in a wheel chair.

On trial with Gentile, a clerk, are Joseph H. Gagliardano, judge; Dominick Mastruanni and Ralph Scanga, inspectors, all members of the election board of the Fifth District, Third Ward. They are charged with conspiracy to violate the vote laws at the 1932 general election.

Playboy Amazed To Wake, Find Self Wed Again

Harrison R. (Playboy) McCready's second marriage in Cumberland, Md., was described today by Dr. Edward Mayer, psychiatrist, in Common Pleas Court much as the playboy described it.

And Margaret Heasley McCready, who has attended the hearings so far, was not in the courtroom.

Dr. Mayer declared:

"McCready said to me:

"'I woke up in bed and saw this sweet, innocent girl there. I said, Peggy, what are you doing here?'

"'She said: "Sweetheart, we're married."'

"And then McCready said: 'Did I look for a bottle then!'"

DECLARED DEFECTIVE

The physician explained that the playboy could drive a car no matter how drunk he might be, and added:

"I came to the conclusion that McCready is constitutionally defective. He has a blunting of the emotions that effects his will. This is aggravated through alcohol.

"If it hadn't been for money, he'd been a bum and tramp long ago."

McCready was back in court today "tapering off," he said, after a week-end in St. Francis Hospital.

'LOST IN DOORS'

And while the hearings went on in the courtroom, where his counsel was trying to upset a $150,000 trust fund the playboy provided for his first wife and their daughter, Margaret Luella McCready, lingered in the corridor. He said:

"I don't remember anything about coming into court drunk last Friday. The only recollection I have is that I got lost in the revolving doors coming in the City-County Building and couldn't find the entrance."

With him was his bodyguard, Robert Kennedy, former Aspinwall constable.

Dr. Mayer this morning testified McCready believed himself a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. Dr. Mayer said:

"Twice he said that he believed himself to be a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. He said that when he drank he got release from something, and what it was he didn't know."

Dr. C. C. Wholey, psychiatrist, also took the stand, and was cross-examined by Attorney O. K. Eaton, representing the first wife and child.

CLASH OVER RATS

The mental expert testified that singeing the hair of a rat was not necessarily a sign of insanity. Margaret Heasley McCready has testified last week that the playboy had done this to scare off rats.

Eaton said:

"Don't you know that there are thousands of people in Allegheny County who believe in this?"

Dr. Wholey said he had never heard of it.

CONFESSION REPUDIATED BY DOCTOR

'Words Put in Mouth,' Surgery Murder Suspect Says

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—Declaring police put the words in her mouth, Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop today repudiated her startling chloroform-gun "accidental" slaying of her daughter-in-law, Rheta Gardner Wynekoop, according to her attorney.

The repudiation was announced by Attorney Frank J. Tyrrell after a 20-minute conference with the accused 62-year-old prominen physician.

Tyrrell's announcement of the repudiation came after he had lost two dramatic battles in court in an effort to free Earle Wynekeep, son of the accused physician and husband of the slain girl.

HELD AS ACCESSORY

Earle was locked up in county jail on a warrant obtained by Assistant State's Attorney Charles S. Dougherty before Judge Jay A. Schiller in Felony Court, charging him with being an accessory before the fact of murder—a crime punishable by death in the electric chair.

Young Wynekoop was taken to Felony Court from the detective bureau by three policemen. In the courtroom Earle sat perfectly at ease, chatting with detectives. He was clean-shaven, immaculately dressed and confident.

When newspaper photographers appeared, he posed patiently, the while discussing the merits of various kinds of film, negatives and cameras. Once he said with a grin:

"I'm charged with murder. I guess some of these photos make me look the part."

'PEOPLE VS. WYNEKOOP'

Attorney Tyrrell then arrived, chatted in a low voice with Wynekoop and awaited the arrival of Judge Jay A. Schiller. Pres-

THOMAS H. THURMOND . . HANGED TO A TREE

TWO HANGED AS CROWD STORMS JAIL

Women Among 6,000 Who Jeer at Pair Begging Mercy

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Thomas H. Thurmond and John M. Holmes, confessed kidnaper-slayers of Brooke Hart, were lynched here last night by a mob of 100 men who smashed their way into the county jail after a two-hour battle to seize the pair.

A whooping, cheering crowd estimated at 6,000 persons looked on.

Thurmond, first to confess, was unconscious when dragged to St. James Park, 100 yards from the jail, partially stripped and hanged to a tree.

Twice he wrenched his hands free and lifted the noose from his head, but the third time it was put there to stay and, still kicking, he was yanked into the air.

THOUSANDS IN MOB

In the glare of torches and flashlights the bodies dangled for half an hour or so—a macabre picture for the thousands who had assembled swiftly after the news of the lynching movement had spread through the city.

The lynching, occurring only a few hours after the torn body of young Hart, son of a wealthy San Jose merchant, had been taken from San Francisco Bay, climaxed a spectacular battle between officers barricaded in the jail and the determined mob.

The muttering throng began gathering about the jail about 9 p. m.

Two shots, fired from the crowd as a signal, started the first attack. A barrage of rocks, gathered from across the alley where a new postoffice building is under construction, clattered against the jail walls. Officers within the jail let loose with three tear gas bombs. Blinded and weeping, the attackers fell back.

BATTLE THROUGH TEAR GAS

The blinding tear gas from the first three bombs was still hanging like a thin veil about the building when the second attack began. Several of the attackers took from the postoffice building a piece of steel pipe eight inches in diameter and about 20 feet long

COURT UPHOLDS NESBIT TRUST

The $750,000 insurance trust fund left to his widow and children by Harrison Nesbit, late president of the defunct Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A., was upheld today in Philadelphia by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

Counsel for 10 banks, creditors of Nesbit, had sought to obtain possession of the trust, charging the banker had set it up to defraud his creditors. He was insolvent when the fund was set up, William Watson Smith, counsel for the banks, stated.

H. Fred Mercer, attorney for the Nesbit family, argued that Nesbit had paid for the fund out of his salary of $50,000 a year, and alleged his income for years averaged $160,000.

Smith maintained that the $1,000,000 Nesbit borrowed should

President Emeritus Of W. Va. U. Dead

He was in active control of the university from 1901 to 1912. He was president of Denison College, Granville, O., from 1890 to 1901.

SANTA TO CALL ON PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Santa Claus this year will find Franklin D. Roosevelt's stocking hanging right in front of the Presidential fireplace. Mrs. Roosevelt said today:

"Santa always has filled Franklin's stocking! And the rest of the family always hang their stockings in Franklin's room, about the fireplace."

In fact, as Mrs. Roosevelt described the traditional family Christmas celebration, the whole White House party will center about the President.

He reads Dickens' "Christmas Carol" to the family group on Christmas Eve, starting at tea time, and finishing before dinner. He directs the trimming of the tree, after the little children are in bed.

To his bed the grandchildren come on Christmas morning, and are allowed to sit closest to him, and to open their stockings first.

The President's mother will come down from Hyde Park, the two younger boys will be home from school, there will be a young folks dancing party on December 30, and a party for the children at 4 o'clock the day after Christmas.

Messenger of Bank Robbed in Trolley

SCRANTON, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Frank Mattaz, messenger for the Providence Bank, of Scranton, was held up and robbed by three men in a street car in North Scranton today. Police say the robbers got only a small sum in cash, but that the loot contained several large checks.

RYAN BURNED IN EFFIGY

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Nov. 27.—The burning in effigy of Marty Ryan, fiery insurgent mine leader in Fayette County, the dynamiting of homes of rival members and sporadic outbursts of violence yesterday marked the continuation of celebrations of elections held at "captive" mines.

Five hundred miners assembled on a baseball diamond at Grindstone, Fayette County, cheered wildly as the "body" of Ryan, encased in a coffin, was burned, following a speech by "Dude" McClendon, Negro miner, who mourned because Ryan died "by accident on purpose." The celebrants were said to have been connected with the Miners' Independent Brotherhood at Colonial Mines No. 3 and No. 4.

There were four bombings during the boisterous week-end, three at Grindstone and the other at Colonial No. 3. Eight Brotherhood miners were spattered with buckshot at Smock.

Thief Takes Germs From Doctor's Car

GLEN COVE, L. I., Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Police were searching this section today for a petty thief who unwittingly stole a tube containing enough typhoid fever culture, according to Dr. George Zucalla, to contaminate the entire Forest Park district.

The culture was left in a bag in Dr. Zucalla's automobile last night. Dr. Zucalla is a son-in-law of Antonio Belo, internationally known sculptor.

Gin, Nude Dance Party Lead to Suicide

International News Service.

HARRISON, N. Y., Nov. 27.—Jealousy today was ascribed by Medical Examiner A. O. Square as the cause of the suicide of Leonard C. Zaiss, 41, a sculptor, who shot and killed himself in his home here after an all-night drinking party during which the pretty, blonde wife of an artist guest danced in the nude while the three others present drank gin highballs and applauded.

Zaiss, according to the stories told police by his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bateman, the guests, shot himself after his wife upbraided him for entering Mrs. Bateman's bedroom.

According to Mrs. Zaiss, the Batemans came here to have dinner with the Zaisses. Cocktails were served before and during dinner, and after dinner the four drank until daybreak. Mrs. Bateman told police:

"About that time my husband suggested I dance in the nude, which was agreeable to me, so I danced."

Mrs. Bateman and Mrs. Zaiss retired shortly afterward while Bateman went outside. Mrs. Zaiss told police:

"My husband helped me to my bedroom and then went into 'he room where Mrs. Bateman was.

"I called out, 'Leonard, what are you going into that room for?' He came out of Mrs. Bateman's room after a few minutes and I told him:

"'You are nothing but a dirty rotter.'"

He told me:

"'You're right, Lillian. I am no good. I am going to end it.'"

Rolph Pledges Pardon To San Jose Lynchers

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Gov. James Rolph, Jr., said today the lynching in San Jose last night of Thomas Thurmond and John Holmes, confessed kidnapers and slayers of Brooke Hart, should result in fewer kidnapings throughout the country, and that he would pardon any one arrested for the lynchings. He declared:

"That was a fine lesson to the whole nation. There will be less kidnaping in the country now. They made a good job of it.

"If anyone is arrested for the good job I'll pardon them all. I hope this lesson will serve in every state of the union."

The Governor postponed his trip to Boise, Idaho, to attend a Governors' conference, not for the purpose of being on hand to call out troops, but to prevent it. He said:

"If I had gone away someone would have called out the troops on me, and I promised in Los Angeles I would not do that. Why should I call out troops to protect those two fellows?

"The people make the laws, don't they? Well, if the people have confidence that troops will not be called out to mow them down when they seek to protect themselves against kidnapers there is liable to be swifter justice and fewer kidnapings."

HART'S KIDNAPERS LYNCHED BY JEERING MOB OF 6,000

TWO MEN TAKEN FROM JAIL AFTER BATTLE, HANGED TO TREES IN PARK

Officers turned loose another barrage of tear gas, momentarily stopping the assault. After waiting a few moments for the gas to lift, the mob stormed ahead once more, playing a fire hose on the building as it advanced. A second group seized another pipe and joined the attackers.

Sheriff William J. Emig, whose quick action had resulted in the arrest of Thurmond while the latter was making a ransom demand by telephone to the Hart home a week after the young victim had been put to death, was knocked senseless. Other officers were manhandled and brushed aside.

In the cell which had imprisoned David A. Lamson, now under sentence to hang for the murder of his attractive wife, Allene, at Stanford University last May, the mob laid hands upon the whimpering Thurmond, dragging him to the street and raining blows upon him.

HOLMES GIVES BATTLE

Holmes struggled as he was dragged from the cell that once held Douglas Templeton, now serving a life sentence for the murder of his aunt. Likewise he was dragged out and pummeled.

Down the alley between the courthouse and the partially constructed postoffice and across the street in the palm-fringed park they were dragged. Officers, who had given up the fight, were closed out of the picture as the approving thousands lined the bordering streets.

The mob selected a limb of a tall tree, looped a rope about the unconscious Thurmond's neck and hoisted him aloft while the crowd whooped its approval. The clothing was torn from the lower part of the body and he hung there half clad.

The business of choosing a limb for Holmes required about 10 minutes. A tree some 200 yards from where Thurmond was dangling was finally selected. He was stripped of all clothing and jerked upward.

The body of Thurmond was cut down finally and the crowd swarmed into the park to break souvenir twigs from the hanging limb. The assembled thousands were beginning to drift away when the body of Holmes was taken down.

Sheriff Emig, after recovering consciousness, stood by, helpless, until the crowd had wreaked its vengeance. Then he went to a hospital for treatment. Howard Buffington, a deputy, who was struck from behind while pleading with the mob, and State Highway Patrolman Nick Gladner also received emergency treatment. Several persons were struck by flying missiles or burned by tear gas bursts.

Deputy's Own Story Of Battle in Jail

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Here is the story of deputy Sheriff John Moore on the lynching of John M. Holmes and Thomas H. Thurmond, confessed kidnap-killers of Brooke Hart:

"The inside of the county jail was fogged with tear gas when the mob rushed in behind the battering ram.

"I was standing on the stairs, inside the steel mesh door, with Deputy Sheriffs Earle Hamilton and Howard Buffington. We had only a few gas bombs left and we knew they had us.

"The mob brushed past us to Holmes' cell on the second floor, and four men stood me against a wall, searched me and took my keys. They went in for Holmes, who was hiding in the lavatory of his cell.

"He came out crying, 'I'm not Holmes, I'm not Holmes!' But one of the lynchers rushed up and grabbed him by the neck and told him to shut up. Another fellow cracked him on the jaw.

"They pulled him to his feet and stood him against the wall, still unconscious, while others kept hitting him in the face with their fists. They finally put a rope around his neck and dragged him head first down the steps.

"Then they went up on the third floor and found Thurmond hanging by his hands to the iron grating of a high window inside the lavatory, where he thought they wouldn't see him.

"He didn't try to deny his identity, but he came out sniveling and his face was very white. I have never seen human beings look so terrified as Holmes and Thurmond.

"Thurmond kept repeating 'Don't string me up. For God's sake don't string me up.' And they hit him as they did Holmes and dragged him down the steps with a rope around his neck.

"They took both men across the street, threw the rope ends over tree limbs and jerked them roughly off their feet to die.

"There were women and children in the crowd and they saw that whole thing in the park. Some of the children were babies in their mothers' arms.

"I heard a number of women laugh, even after it was all over, and say it had been a good thing."

Lynching Like Carnival To Huge Crowd in Park

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Not unlike a carnival crowd was the throng of several thousand persons who jammed St. James Park here last night to witness the lynching of Thomas H. Thurmond and John M. Holmes, confessed kidnaper-slayers of Brooke Hart.

Men, women and children of all ages were there.

Over the statue erected to William McKinley, who visited San Jose in 1900, they swarmed for points of vantage until it was a black mass of humanity. It was only a few yards from this statue that Holmes, fighting to the last, was pulled to an overhanging tree limb.

PARENTS MOURN LYNCHED PAIR

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 27.—(AP.)—In the tragedy-darkened home of John Holmes, lynched by a mob for the kidnap slaying of Brooke L. Hart, his father and mother clung to faith in his innocence here today.

Maurice Holmes, the father, for 30 years a respected tailor in the community, said:

"My son was innocent."

Haggard and near collapse, the father disclosed that he visited Holmes in the county jail Sunday a few hours before the son was dragged out to his death by the howling mob. He quoted his son as saying:

"Dad, I swear to you I had no part in this thing."

In a home at Campbell, a short distance from San Jose, the parents of Thomas H. Thurmond, victim with Holmes of the mob vengeance, sat with their grief.

Thurmond, whose sister sings in a church choir and whose brother is a minister at Chico, Cal., was a regular attendant at church services.

'BEST JOB EVER,' SAYS LYNCHER

International News Service.

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 27.—In a beer parlor after the lynching of Jack Holmes and Thomas H. Thurmond, a husky man early today told of dragging Thurmond from his cell. The man said:

"He was plumb crazy. He was trying to climb the walls of his cell like a monkey when we came in. He was squealing and leaping about, and I had to chase him and pull him down."

A gray-haired man, standing at the bar, was the center of a close-knitted group. He was one of the men who put the rope around Thurmond's neck. He said:

"It's the best job I've done in my life."

Another man said:

The bartender added:

Ex-President Hoover Mum on Lynching

PALO ALTO, Cal., Nov. 27.—(INS.)—At his home on San Juan hill, 20 miles away from the scene of the San Jose lynching, former President Herbert Hoover read reports of the mob activity, it was learned today.

In accordance with his policy not to discuss any public question, Mr. Hoover, according to his secretary, declined to make any comment on the hanging of Jack Holmes and Thomas Thurmond.

Mother of Hart In Critical Condition

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Mrs. Alexander Hart, mother of Brooke L. Hart, the finding of whose body yesterday led to the lynching of his confessed kidnapers, Thomas H. Thurmoid and John M. Holmes, was reported in a serious condition today.

Mrs. Hart has been ill, and relatives said they feared mental trouble as a result of the developments.

BAR LIEBWITZ BODYGUARDS

International News Service.

DECATUR, Ala., Nov. 27.—Two burly personal bodyguards of Samuel S. Liebowitz, chief defense counsel, were barred from the courtroom by Circuit Judge W. W. Callahan today as the state of Alabama, for the third time, began retrial of the Scottsboro case.

Leibowitz brought the two bodyguards, Harold Fox and Archie Daley, with him from New York. An armed deputy sheriff was assigned by the court to safeguard the New York attorney after he told of receiving threats.

Judge Callahan took the action after a sharp clash with Leibowitz.

Preliminaries to selecting the jury began. Heywood Patterson, twice sentenced to death and twice saved by court reversals, is the first of the seven Negroes charged with attacks on two white mill workers to face retrial.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—(INS.)—A statement given out today at Beth David Hospital regarding the condition of Ruby Bates, Scottsboro witness, who recently underwent a major operation, declared she was "much better." Her testimony, slated to be taken at her bedside, defense counsel hopes will again be an important factor in saving from execution seven Negroes.

PROPOSE DEATH IN KIDNAP LAW

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—A move to amend the Lindbergh kidnaping law to invoke the death penalty is under serious consideration by the Senate sub-committee on racketeering, Col. Franklin Hutchinson announced yesterday.

Col. Hutchinson, the committee's chief investigator, said:

"The feeling that the death penalty, instead of life imprisonment, should be invoked is growing, and the committee may decide to make that recommendation."

The death penalty was proposed when Congress enacted the law after the kidnaping and slaying of the infant son of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, but it was changed to life imprisonment.

Amendments to bring under the law as federal offenders kidnapers who communicate in any way with the families of victims is another suggestion being seriously weighed by the committee, said Hutchinson.

FATE OF TOUHY NEARS JURY

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 27.—(AP.)—The $100,000 William Hamm, Jr., kidnaping case neared an end in Federal District Court here today. A motion for a directed verdict of acquittal was denied by Judge Joyce.

Prosecution and defense were ready for final arguments in the trial of four Chicago men accused of abducting Hamm, millionaire St. Paul brewer, last June 15 and holding him nearly four days for ransom.

With testimony completed last Friday, each side had two and one-half hours today for its arguments to the jury. Indications were that the case would be in the hands of the jury early tonight.

The defendants are Roger Touhy, Eddie McFadden, Willie Sharkey and Gustav Schaefer.

Victim's Mother Pleads in Vain For Body

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 27.—(INS.)—A woman who said she was Thomas Thurmond's mother pleaded with the crowd which hanged him to cut him down and give her his body. She cried:

"Oh, please! Give him to me!"

A man roughly shoved her back.

She screamed, covered her eyes, and ran.

ANTI-NAZIS RIOT IN BOSTON

BOSTON, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Six men were under arrest and several nursed bruised heads today after police had charged a crowd of more than 5,000 persons who gathered in the vicinity of Ford Hall to protest a speech in support of Chancellor Adolf Hitler by a German professor.

A large detail of police established lines around the hall last night after the crowd surged up Beacon Hill calling "down with Hitler; down with Nazism" and otherwise attempted to disrupt the meeting where Dr. Friedrich Schoenemann, professor at the University of Berlin on "Why I Believe in the Hitler Government."

BERLIN, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—The long-threatened schism in the German Protestant Church was believed by many churchmen to be definitely nearer today.

While Nazi Christians in Thuringia were demanding a policy more radical than that previously enunciated by leaders, the rumble of opposition to the Nazi Christian program also gathered volume.

Many pastors in Bavaria and Wuerttemberg announced their secession from the Nazi Christian movement. Three well known professors of theology also pulled away from the Nazi Christians.

DEPUTY SAVES THIRD SLAYER

International News Service.

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 27.—Only an impassioned plea by Jailer Howard Buffington saved a third lynching, it was revealed here today.

As the vigilantes took Jack Holmes and Thomas H. Thurmond to their deaths, a fiery-tongued member of the crowd in the jail set up a cry for Anthony Serpa, convicted yesterday of manslaughter in connection with the fatal shooting of a rancher east of San Jose. He cried:

"Let's get Serpa and make a good thorough job of this."

Buffington ran to Serpa's cell, took his place at the door, and his voice rang through the jail. He yelled at the crowd:

"You've gone mad. This man has been tried by a jury and justice has been meted out. Let him alone. You're bent on spilling enough blood tonight. Don't let another man's death be charged to you when you answer the last roll call."

The crowd was stopped, amazed by Buffington's plea, and turned aside, letting Serpa alone.

Cornell Student Admits Kidnap Hoax

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—(INS.)—Just a hoax, was the "kidnaping" of Charles R. Cohen, 18-year-old Cornell University sophomore and son of Samuel B. Cohen, New York City attorney.

This was admitted to a Department of Justice official today by young Cohen. The boy explained he had not been doing well in his studies and, fearing he was about to be "flunked," concocted a kidnaping story.

GIRL LEADS MOB STORMING JAIL OF KIDNAPERS

Clad in Fur Coat, She Urges Men to Seize Victims

By RALPH B. JORDAN
International News Service.

SAN JOSE, Cal., Nov. 27.—California vigilantes today invoked lynch law to punish kidnaping and murder. A girl was one of the leaders.

In a fierce throwback to the tumultuous days of '49, they stormed the county jail here, seized two confessed kidnapers and murderers, stripped the clothes from their bodies, strung them to sycamore trees in the public square and then attempted to make a pyre out of the body of one of the victims.

Newspaper cameramen, following the vigilantes into the park were set upon, their cameras broken and resounding smacks delivered to their ears. One of the mob declared:

"There'll be no pictures of this necktie party. Nobody's going to get identified and prosecuted for this."

The last charge on the battered jail was led by a blonde girl in a fur coat. Her eyes flashed as she waved to the men. A man screamed:

"Don't let a girl outdo us."

With a roar the crowd poured into the jail.

Sheriff Emig and his men pleaded to let the law take its course.

They stood on the stairs leading to the second floor, where John Holmes was incarcerated, and to the third and top floor, where Thomas Thurmond cowered. Emig cried:

"You're not going to get them, men."

He and his aides fought with clubs and fists.

The leader, swinging on the Sheriff, retorted:

"We'll get them, all right."

Soon Emig and his men were down and the invaders were sweeping to the second floor.

Holmes stood behind the bars of his cell and glared under lowered eyelids as the first of the mob appeared.

Keys were taken from the jailor and the cell opened.

In the meantime another group had ascended to the third floor.

Thurmond was cringing in the corner of his cell. He screamed:

"Don't, please don't."

"You didn't think of Brooke Hart or his folks. It's too late now. You're going to pay on the rope. Take him, men."

The cry went up:

"To the park To the park!"

be paid in part out of the fund, and accused Nesbit of borrowing to support the bank's stock—a direct violation of the banking laws.

OTHER TRUST FUNDS

Upwards of $4,000,000,000 in insurance trust funds in Pennsylvania would have been in jeopardy if the Supreme Court's ruling had been unfavorable, according to Attorney Mercer. More than $30,000,000,000 are tied up in insurance trusts of the nation.

The case came before the Supreme Court in September, after Judge James H. Gray, of the Common Pleas Court, had ruled:

"In Pennsylvania, the established public policy favors the protection of a wife and children in the proceeds of life insurance policies on the life of a husband and father, even though the policies have been taken out and premiums paid when the insured was insolvent."

Judge Gray ordered the trust fund, less $200,000 to Ohio National Bank at Columbus, given the family. This money to the Ohio bank Nesbit had directed the trustees to pay with insurance funds. The bank was instructed to return $100,000 in collateral.

AUTO CRASH VICTIM

Nesbit was killed October 31, 1931, in an automobile accident.

In reply to the charges of the banks that fraud had entered into the proceedings, Attorney Mercer stated that Nesbit's creditors were satisfied with the collateral he had put, adding:

"But when he died they set up the cry that he had tried to defraud them."

Chief Justice Robert S. Frazer withdrew from the case, asserting he had been a stockholder in the bank.

The Nesbit family fighting the case includes Mrs. Edith Nesbit, widow and three children, Scott H., and Betty Nesbit and Mrs. Jerome P. Bowers, of Hiland place, Chicago.

MAYER DENIES FOX THEATER DEAL CHARGE

Caused No Change in Federal Records, Says Magnate

CULVER CITY, Cal., Nov. 27.—Louis B. Mayer, vice president of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, today made public a telegram he has sent to the Senate Banking Committee in Washington denying he had caused Department of Justice records to be changed in connection with Fox-Loew theater property merger, as had been charged on the witness stand by William Fox, former theater magnate.

The telegram of Mr. Mayer follows:

"Mr. Ferdinand Pecora,
"Senate Banking Investigating Committee,
"Washington, D. C.

"I have read in the daily press the statement of William Fox to the effect that I told him I had caused the records of the Department of Justice to be changed in reference to the Fox-Loew merger. It is needless for me to say that I never made such a statement to Mr. Fox and I certainly never made such a request to the Department of Justice or any other department or person.

Couzens and Aldrich Clash at Hearing

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Senator Couzens (Rep.), of Michigan, denounced an interruption of the Senate's stock market investigation today by W. W. Aldrich, president of the Chase National Bank, and said the inquiry committee would not be "dictated to."

This took place after the investigators had received evidence that the Chase National Bank lent $6,000,000 in 1930 to General Theaters Equipment, Inc., for market operations in Fox Film stock, designed to strengthen the market preliminary to large refinancing operations.

Couzens expressed resentment at an interruption by Aldrich to explain that Hermann Place, Chase vice president, was not a director of Fox Film Corporation in 1931 when it paid dividends of $4,104,000 despite losses of $5,560,304.

It was the second time Aldrich had voluntarily taken the witness stand and the outspoken Michigan Senator plainly showed his displeasure.

Couzens had just remarked that, when the dividend was paid, the company's obligations were larger than its surplus.

COUZENS ANGERED

Aldrich moved up to the table and sat down beside Couzens to remark that Place, who was then on the witness stand, was not then connected with the Fox company and knew nothing about it.

Couzens retorted angrily:

"I'm not questioning Mr. Place. I'm making some observations and not charging anything against the Chase bank and I don't want any interruptions from you.

"Mr. Aldrich interposes observtaions whenever he proposes to do so.

"I resent it, the committee will not be dictated to by Mr. Aldrich or anyone else.

"I don't see that any comment from Mr. Aldrich at this time is necessary."

Aldrich returned to his seat without replying to Couzens.

PRIEST AIDED COAL BARON

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Nov. 27.—The late Rev. Father B. P. Kenna, ex-Pittsburgh priest who for 40 years was pastor of St. John's Roman Catholic Church here, was one of the shrewdest business men in the history of the coke region, his friends said today.

Father Kenna's will, filed Saturday, left an estate estimated at $500,000, in which bequests were made to virtually every Catholic institutions and many clergymen in Western Pennsylvania.

His diversion, his friends said, was trading in stocks and bonds, and he followed the market closely. Once he lent J. V. Thompson, late coal baron, $100,000, and later Thompson owed him over $250,000, it was reported.

W. Franklin Lane, of Uniontown, and the Rev. Robert McDonald, of Braddock, were named executors.

Just a Gigolo, But He's Faithful—Unto Death

Universal Service.

NICE, France, Nov. 27.—Meet Pepito—just a gigolo—who's put his profession on the honest man's map.

Last month an elderly Philadelphia widow, Mrs. Raechel Webster Wilwin, died here from an overdose of a sleep-inducing drug.

Formerly possessed of millions, with six servants and a multitude of chic friends on the Riviera, she faced a pauper's grave because there was not enough money left to open her magnificent private mausoleum constructed in affluent days. No one offered help.

"You need money to bury Mrs. Wilwin? One thousand francs? Here it is."

Freed Nurse Saved Life Of His Son, Duggan Says

Miss Weltz Brave As She Starts Trip Home

International News Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27.—Bearing up bravely under the nervous strain brought about by the court ordeal which ended in her acquittal on a charge of murdering William H. R. Grace, shipping magnate, Frieda Wilhelmina Weltz, war nurse, planned to leave here today for her former home in Connellsville, Pa.

Miss Weltz's brother and sister will accompany her, while John B. Duggan, Jr., Connellsville attorney, who successfully defended her, planned to make the return trip across the continent by airplane.

Preparing for his departure, Attorney Duggan explained his interest in the Santa Cruz murder case. His interest was first and foremost in Miss Weltz personally. He said:

"Miss Weltz is responsible for my 17-year-old boy, Arthur Duggan, being alive today.

"She was the nurse who attended my wife when our boy was born. The attending physician said he was 'still born.' Frieda Weltz brought life back to him. She battled for hours against almost hopeless odds.

"If there had been any doubt on my part about wanting to come here to defend her, I still would not have had any choice, as my wife and my boy told me to get here as fast as air travel would bring me. Twice during the trial I received wires from them. In effect, they told me, 'Don't come home unless you bring Frieda.' That was the incentive I had in defending her."

Attorney Duggan revealed his total "fee" in the case was $500, advanced by members of the Weltz family to help pay expenses of his two airplane trips across the country.

SHANK ON TRIAL IN KILLING OF 4

BENTON, Ark., Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Circuit Court Judge Thomas E. Toler overruled a defense motion to quash the indictment as the case of Mark H. Shank, Akron (O.) attorney, charged with the picnic poison murder of four persons, was called for trial in Circuit Court here today.

The motion set out that the grand jury was highly prejudicial to the defendant.

Shank is charged with the poison murders of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Colley, also of Akron, and their two sons, Clement, 11, and Clarence, 7. One child, Alvin, 4, also was poisoned, but recovered.

The tragic picnic lunch at which four members of the Colley family drank fatal draughts of poisoned grape juice was spread in a woodland setting near here last August.

JUDGE BAFFLED BY JOYCE BOOK

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—The significance of "obscene" is being pondered by Federal Judge John M. Woolsey, who reserved decision on an action brought by the government to prevent American publication of James Joyce's "Ulysses."

Judge Woolsey said he had read most of the book during his September vacation and found himself puzzled whether it was "obscene." He commented:

"Some of it was so obscure and unintelligible, that it was difficult to understand it all. It was like walking around without your feet on the ground."

Morris L. Ernst, counsel for the publishers, said the book was unintelligible to him.

But Samuel Coleman, Assistant United States Attorney, made no such admission, and argued that the book contained obscene passages.

Coleman argued that the "obscene passages" could not be deleted without ruining the work, so the entire book should be banned from publication in this country.

'FAIR BREAK' AIM OF RUDY'S WIFE

Universal Service.

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Nov. 27.—Fay Webb Vallee harbors no malice against her crooner-husband, the famed Rudy Vallee, and has no thought of divorce.

But she does want—and intends to get—a settlement that will correspond a little more closely with her position in life as the wife of a man who earns $350,000 a year.

Benjamin S. Cohen, the exotic Fay's attorney, made this altogether plain last night in connection with the suit filed in New York to enjoin the crooner from getting a Mexican divorce.

Mrs. Vallee accepted a property settlement of $100 a week because she was led to believe that Rudy was financially embarrassed at the time, the attorney said.

Winchell Gives Orchid To Man Who Shot Radio

Brackenridge 'Hero' Who Hated Noise Wins Acclaim

Negley is the fellow who Mr. and Mrs. John Grundy say "silenced" their radio with a well-directed shot from an Army rifle from his apartment underneath theirs at 808 Ninth avenue, Brackenridge.

The orchid was a gift to Negley, announced last night by Walter Winchell, Broadway columnist and radio monologist.

Negley said, when arraigned:

"I don't care if I get 10 years. It was worth it to stop that radio."

It all happened two weeks ago. It was 2 a. m. and Negley, his wife and children had found it impossible to sleep. Tapping on the ceiling had no effect.

The bullet tore through the flooring in the Grundy apartment, passed a few inches from the radio and lodged in the ceiling. They called the police and Patrolman Roy Hanna found Negley dressed and ready to go to jail.

Police Justice John Bew of Brackenridge said:

I know you didn't intend to hit anybody. I'll hold you in $500 bail."

J., Nov. 27.—(Universal.)—Six-year-old Sheldon Clark III will be one of 12 witnesses to appear before the special grand jury when it meets here Tuesday to inquire into the fatal shooting of his father, Sheldon Clark, 35, son of a wealthy oil magnate, by his wife, Audrey, 24, at their Paulsboro home last Monday.

Acting Prosecutor Lynwood Lord said today that if the grand jury indicts the young widow she probably will be placed on trial at the December term of court.

1-CENT ERROR TRAPS TELLER

How a discrepancy of one cent in the accounts of Richard D. Hill, 30, former teller at the First National Bank of Swissvale, led to a discovery of his peculations and finally, today, to a penitentiary sentence was revealed in Federal Court.

Hill, pleading guilty to embezzlement of $12,829, was sentenced to serve a year and one day in federal penitentiary by Judge Nelson McVicar.

The defendant told the court he took $200 from the bank funds six years ago to pay house rent. He covered up by falsifying records, he said, and systematically "got away with it" for six years before a bookkeeper finally checking up discovered an error of one cent. Subsequent investigations disclosed the whole shortage.

'Necrophagus' Trips Spelling Bee Experts

Secretary, Teacher Victors in Annual Word Battle

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—The erudite of the town stumbled and fumbled among "mnemonics," "opiophagism," "perspicacity" and other assorted tongue-twisters at the annual Town Hall Club spelling bee last night.

But when the last contestant rode an exhausted vowel over the finish line, a private secretary and a school teacher-writer stood victorious amid the shambles of "polyphony," "plagiarism" and "necrophagus" which had earlier downed a university professor, an editor, a foreign correspondent and a dozen other hardy dictionary warriors.

Miss Lou Helmuth, the teacher, won the first of the two spelling sections with a devastating attack on "polyphony" and "plagiarism."

Philip Kerby, a former Far Eastern newspaper correspondent, had some difficulty with "prestidigitator."

John Bakeless, in charge of the ammunition, said:

"It seems I heard some z's in your version."

Kerby, in a tone which implied that "z" was probably the only letter omitted, replied:

"No, there were no z's."

Dr. Henry Pratt Fairchild, professor of sociology at New York University, took "nemesis," "millenium" and "desiccate" in his stride, but fell before the onslaught of "hosanna."

"Hosanna in the highest," murmured the professor, then spelled: "H-o-s-s-a-n-n-a-h."

"Colicky" and "cinnamon," two of last year's twisters, proved easy, but the rout came on "pseudonym," "myrrh," "perspicacity," "charades," "dogerel," "gizzard" and "accede."

RESERVE HEAD TO CALL ON ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—A Warm Springs visit by Gov. Eugene Black, of the Federal Reserve Board, drew new emphasis to President Roosevelt's monetary policy today as Acting Secretary Morgenthau busied himself with the government's huge financing needs.

Black leaves tomorrow night to spend Wednesday with Mr. Roosevelt.

News of his trip became known only a few hours after Morgenthau returned from Roosevelt's Georgia home.

Beyond confirming that he would make the trip, Black declined to discuss the visit. Morgenthau had nothing to say to newsmen, either, but quickly began conferences on ways of meeting on December 15 more than $727,000,000 in maturing Treasury certificates.

The Reconstruction Corporation price of gold was fixed today at $33.76 an ounce, the figure which has remained unchanged since before Morgenthau's trip South. Some quarters viewed this lack of fluctuation as part of a policy to steady financial markets for the forthcoming financing operations.

Black's projected visit recalled that the Federal Reserve System has halted its purchases of government securities. During the summer it purchased more than $500,000,000 in government issues.

Gov. Harrison, governor of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, was a visitor at the Treasury. Harrison usually is consulted on financing matters.

Roosevelt Program Upheld by Moley

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Replying to critics of the Roosevelt monetary policies, Raymond Moley, former assistant Secretary of State, yesterday asked this question. "Someone has to fix the price of gold; why shouldn't it be the United States?" Moley answered it by adding:

"For years the Bank of England has fixed the price of gold and no one ever howled. Now that the President has decided to have the United States fix the price, why should there be any objections?"

RADIO PRIEST CARRIES FIGHT TO AL'S CITY

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Father Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit's crusading clergyman, arrived in New York today, again asserting that Al Smith's ideas on "baloney dollars" were a "lot of baloney." He said:

"It is the first time that I have taken issue with Mr. Smith on any question, and I regret that I had to do it.

"But anyone standing in the way of President Roosevelt's monetary program must be answered."

Father Coughlin declined to elaborate on his address of last night, in which he sharply attacked Smith for an editorial upholding the gold standard and terming "baloney dollars" any but gold dollars.

He would reserve that for tonight, he said, when he will make an address at the Hippodrome.

He would advocate, he said, maintenance of a gold standard "supported by silver brought back to its normal value."

Attacks on the President's monetary moves as productive of unsound currency were "a lot of baloney," Father Coughlin said.

DETROIT, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Asserting that President Roosevelt stands for sound money and will not be stopped by "bankers and their puppets," the Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin, in a speech Sunday, attacked Alfred E. Smith for his editorial in the New Outlook in which he called for a return to the gold standard.

Without immediately referring to Mr. Smith by name, Father Coughlin asserted in his opening remarks that "a Catholic gentleman of high social standing has loaned his illustrious name to a cause that is inconceivable."

(Father Coughlin, speaking from the Hippodrome Theater in New York, will be heard over Station WMCA (570 kilocyles) and WOR (710 kilocycles) at 9:30 tonight.)

Smith 'Worships Golden Calf,' Curley Says

BOSTON, Nov. 27.—(INS.)—Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, of New York, was described as a "worshipper of the golden calf," and an "enemy of social and economic justice," in a radio address by Mayor James M. Curley (Dem.), this afternoon.

While not mentioning Smith by name, he identified him through the latter's now-famous denunciation of what he called President's "baloney dollar." Curley said:

"There is every indication that notwithstanding the muzzling of the sources of information that ultimately the people will rightly understand and when they do, the rubber dollar and the baloney phrasemakers will be appraised at their true value, namely, enemies of social and economic justice, worshippers of the golden calf."

WALLACE JOINS PRESIDENT

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace joined the recovery council talks today at the "Little White House."

Mr. Wallace arrived unannounced by motor early today. He said the main purpose of his visit was to take up with the President the problem of liquor control after prohibition repeal.

With his arrival, Mr. Roosevelt had with him today the three heads of the recovery campaign. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, industrial administrator, and Secretary Ickes, public works administrator, remained over today for further talks with the chief executive.

There is nothing in prospect in the way of new recovery moves.

JOHNSON HITS FORD CONTRACT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—A protest against the award to a local Ford Motor Company agency of a government contract for Ford trucks has been filed with the Department of Agriculture by Hugh S. Johnson, the NRA administrator.

Johnson contended the dealer, the Northwest Motor Company, of Bethesda, Md., had quoted a figure below the list price and therefore was in violation of the NRA retail code for automobile dealers.

Meanwhile, the Northwest Motor Company indicated it would submit a bid to the War Department tomorrow for 700 new trucks despite its contention that efforts are being made to eliminate Ford products from consideration.

R. L. Sabine, president of the company, protested to Secretary Dern Saturday that specifications for trucks for the Civilian Conservation Corps, originally asked by the Agriculture Department, had been changed with the deliberate purpose of excluding bids on Ford equipment.

The

Forgotten Code

TODAY there are codes for almost everything but the consumer. His is the "Forgotten Code." Yet, without the consumer's help, none of the others can succeed. The Administration has repeatedly referred to the importance of the individual purchaser—how necessary he is to any program of recovery. Yet what have we done about it?

Gimbel Brothers, Inc., Pittsburgh, New York, Philadelphia, and Milwaukee, believe that the time has come to bring you—the consumer, actively into the picture. We propose to learn specifically what you want to purchase—what you consider reasonable prices; to discover your needs—and then buy for them.

Within forty-eight hours Gimbel Brothers will begin one of the most comprehensive surveys on consumer attitudes ever conducted. Simultaneously, in four great metropolitan cities, over 500 trained interviewers will ascertain the needs and preferences of thousands of men and women, in all walks of life. With these findings as a basis, Gimbel Brothers will plan a gigantic series of midwinter sales, involving more than four million dollars' worth of merchandise.

We believe this to be a great forward step in the history of retailing. For weeks, now, we have been carefully preparing a questionnaire—so that every important line of merchandise will be adequately represented. J. David Houser and Associates, perhaps the outstanding agency engaged in measuring public attitudes, will conduct this survey for us.

Gimbel Brothers, Inc., want you—the consumer—to help us construct the consumer's code. Watch for our interviewers

PITTSBURGH NEW YORK PHILADELPHIA MILWAUKEE

PROBE OF NRA SUPPORTED BY DICKINSON

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Full support of the proposed senatorial investigation of the NRA was pledged yesterday by Senator Dickinson, of Iowa, Republican "keynoter" in 1932.

Dickinson said he would "support 100 per cent" his colleague, Senator Nye (Rep.), of North Dakota, in his demand that the Senate delve into the activities of the recovery organization.

At the same time indications on Capitol Hill were that Senator Carter Glass (Dem.), of Virginia, also plans a vigorous attack on NRA when Congress convenes in January. Senator Glass has refused to fly the Blue Eagle over his newspapers in Lynchburg.

Senator Dickinson strongly attacked Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, referring especially to Johnson's recent statement that it would "be easy to know when NRA has failed, if it does, because the air will be full of dead cats." He added:

"I assume Johnson means opponents of the business-stifling NRA are dead cats. Such jingling by Johnson will not save NRA."

BOSTON, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Representative William P. Connery, Jr. (Dem.), chairman of the House Committee on Labor, yesterday in a telegram to President Roosevelt said the administration of the NRA by Gen. Johnson and his deputies was "most disappointing."

Charging the code authorities at present were not representative of the great mass of the American industrial workers, Connery wrote:

"I respectfully request that you forthwith instruct Gen. Johnston to appoint a true representative of the organized industrial workers as co-administrator on each approved code."

EMPLOYMENT DROP SHOWN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—A slight increase in American Federation of Labor unemployment totals last month was attributed today by William Green to reports that more men were seeking work.

The federation president said preliminary reports showed 10,076,000 out of work in October, a figure 11,000 higher than September's total. Then he added:

"This slight increase is due to the fact that, although employment gained a little in October, the gain was not enough to absorb those seeking work for the first time."

He warned that "wholehearted co-operation of our entire citizenry" will be needed during the worst months of winter and asserted that the "NRA program is keeping the employment situation under better control than is usual at this time of year."

Ordinarily, he said, October shows a seasonal decrease of about 450,000 in the number of men at work.

10-DAY RESPITE ON HOTEL CODE

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, industrial administrator, has announced a 10-day leniency period for "unavoidable violations" of the hotel code which goes into effect today.

Through the press he gave assurance to the hotel business that "unavoidable violations of the hotel code will be overlooked for a period of 10 days."

LIQUOR CONTROL BILLS RUSHED IN ASSEMBLY

While Senator William D. Mansfield, Allegheny, was conferring with Gov. Pinchot on this prohibition in the bill as now written, Charlotte E. Carr, secretary of Labor and Industry, joined Cornelia Bryce Pinchot, wife of the Governor, in opposing the restriction on waitresses. She said:

"If we were to return to the old saloon then it would have been right and justly right to eliminate women from the dispensing of liquor. Happily, we are not returning to the old saloon days."

Mrs. Pinchot was one of the signers of a petition asking that the bill be amended to permit waitresses to serve liquor.

The McClure bill, providing for the establishment of state stores and authorizing hotels, restaurants, dining cars, clubs and steamboats to make retail liquor sales, was to be released tonight by a Senate committee, amended slightly from the form in which it passed the lower chamber.

Legislative leaders and the Governor propose to place on clubs restrictions similar to those on other retail establishments. Growing opposition may cause removal of restrictions preventing waitresses from handling liquor.

It is generally agreed this document must reach the Chief Executive's desk by Wednesday. Opposition to many of its features, however, indicate the final stretch may be far from a path of roses. After it clears the Senate finally, the House must give concurrence to amendments made by the upper branch.

FACE HOLIDAY SESSION

Failure of the Legislature to enact either of these two measures by Wednesday will force them to either spend Thanksgiving Day at the capitol or return immediately after the holiday. Without the authority given by these documents, no machinery may be put in motion for controlling the sale of liquor after next Tuesday.

With approximately 10,000 distillery employes thrown into the ranks of the unemployed, the commonwealth is pursuing its campaign for collection of a $2 tax on all liquor either manufactured or stored in the Keystone state between last Wednesday and December 5, the date for official repeal.

Indefinite extensions of time to report the amount of liquor Pennsylvania distilleries have on hand were granted today, the last day to file such reports under the Cordier act imposing $2 per gallon tax on pre-repeal liquor.

Secretary of Revenue Leon D. Metzger said some distilleries might make a tentative report today, adding that it would be physically impossible for some of them to make an inventory of their stock.

Only 200 reports had been filed with the department here at noon today, most of these being from Central Pennsylvania druggists and pharmacists with small amounts of liquor and alcohol on hand.

Administration officials profess to feel little alarm over the shutdown of the distilleries. Friends of the Governor pointed out it was "economically smart" for the manufacturers to cease production until after repeal. They would gain nothing by manufacturing liquor to be taxed $2 per gallon now when the proposed tax after repeal would amount to only $1 per gallon only on products sent out of this state.

For this reason, friends of the Governor are confident the closing of the distilleries is only temporary and re-openings will be made immediately after December 5.

Pinchot Insists On Phillips for Control Board

HARRISBURG, Nov. 27.—(INS.)—Despite his declaration that he will not accept, Thomas W. Phillips' name will be sent to the Senate by Gov. Gifford Pinchot for confirmation as a member of the Liquor Control Board, the Governor said today.

Phillips, "wet" Republican candidate for Governor in 1930 and a former Congressman from Butler, was one of the three men named by Gov. Pinchot to serve on the board which is to be created to regulate liquor in the state after repeal.

FEDERAL LIQUOR CONTROL HIT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—The administration's proposal for federal control of the brewing and liquor distilling industries today was declared by Representative Celler (Dem.), New York, to be a violation of the intent of Congress in passing the National Recovery and Agricultural Adjustment acts.

Celler made the charge at a hearing on a substitute brewing code submitted by President Roosevelt's inter-departmental alcohol committee.

The administration, in proposing to create a federal alcohol control administration to regulate the liquor industry, he asserted, displayed "utter disregard" of the temperance plank inserted in the Democratic national platform at the Chicago convention last year. He cited the platform as urging state control of the liquor business.

E. S. Greenbaum, of the President's committee, told the brewers the committee had definitely decided on the policy of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration. Later, however, E. G. Lowry, Jr., representing the Treasury and the President's committee, said the administrative features of the brewers' code which permits them to set up a code authority to cooperate with the alcohol administration, was being studied further with a view to possible modification.

BANK TAX LAW REPEAL NEAR

HARRISBURG, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Through agreements impossible at the 1933 regular session, the special session of the Legislature is writing the final chapter in the turbulent history of a tax on money at interest.

Enacted by legislators who sought to repeal it several weeks after they passed it, the law is to be blotted from the statute books before it is actually effective as a potential producer of $8,000,000 revenue.

The tax cannot be collected before next March, and by that time legislators agree the "Einstein theory"—so named by legislators after the Allegheny County Senator who sponsored the act—will be a thing of the past.

Under this act, all interest bearing deposits are subject to the corporate loans tax of 4 mills. A man with $100 in a savings account or interest-bearing time deposits account is subject to a tax of 40 cents.

Hurley Wills $25,000 To Notre Dame Fund

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 27.—(AP.)—The late Edward N. Hurley, of Chicago, who died November 14, willed $25,000 to the University of Notre Dame for scholarships to be awarded students earning half of their expenses, university officials learned today.

HOSPITALS ASK EXEMPTION ON ALCOHOL TAX

After December 5, when Pennsylvania's ratification of repeal goes into effect, a new government tax of $3.85 a gallon will make it impossible for hospitals to use alcohol in the amounts required, Dr. G. Walter Zulauf, superintendent of Allegheny General Hospital, said Saturday. He was speaking at a special meeting of 13 trustees of the Hospital Association of Pennsylvania in the William Penn Hotel.

Plans were made for immediate steps to demand hospital exemption.

COST PROHIBITIVE

Dr. Zulauf explained that his own hospital recently ordered approximately 500 gallons at a price of $154.65, but had been informed by the manufacturer that the floor tax brough the cost to $1,067. He said:

"Of course, such an expenditure is out of the question."

Officers of the association said that consumption by hospitals of alcohol for surgical purposes, rubbing of patients, for laboratory use and other purposes averages seven and one-half gallons a year for each occupied bed. Hospitals of 600 bed capacity, therefore, would require as high as 4,500 gallons a year, taxable under House Bill No. 9 at $3.85 per gallon, Dr. Zulauf continued:

"The real cost commercially is 49½ cents a gallon. The prohibitive cost lies in the $3.85 tax.

"Hospitals are already doing their share of relief work in care of sick unemployed and their families. Why should they be penalized further, even though the tax may go for relief, by being crippled in use of medicinal alcohol?"

GIVEN SAME AMOUNT

Passage of amendment No. 8, providing $2,231,365 for 163 state-aided hospitals, saved the institutions from curtailing emergency care, but only gave them the amount they had received for the previous two years, Miss Jessie J. Turnbull, association president, pointed out, adding:

"The fact that they have not been included in the special session of the Legislature leaves them in so precarious a position that they cannot withstand the new alcohol tax. Unless it is amended, nursing and surgical care of patients will suffer."

Loan Chief Forbids Political Speeches

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(INS.)—Political speeches by employes of the Home Loan Bank Board or the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, particularly when they attack the administration, will be grounds for their immediate dismissal, John H. Fahey, chairman of the board, declared today.

Fahey was commenting on the dismissal by the state manager of Minnesota of an examiner who, in an address, had assailed Secretary of the Treasury Woodin, Secretary of Interior Ickes and Hugh S. Johnson, Industrial Recovery Administrator.

Dr. Goldenson to Be M. E. Dinner Speaker

Dr. Samuel H. Goldenson, recently elected rabbi of Temple Emanu-El, New York, will be the principal speaker at the annual dinner of the South Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, Wilkinsburg, to be held December 4 at the church.

GOLLMAR WINS IN OFFICIAL COUNT

Sheriff Frank I. Gollmar, Republican, incumbent, has been reelected, according to returning figures, completed today, unless he loses the election in the recount of ballots in approximately 100 districts.

The returning board, completing its tabulation of the vote today, gave Gollmar 166,747 to 166,222 for his Democratic opponent, John Heinz. Gollmar's plurality was 525, whereas unofficial figures, published by the newspapers following the election, indicated his victory by 428.

In the return board's tabulation was the result from 18 ballot boxes recounted, but not the return from the Eighth District, Seventeenth Ward, which went Democratic and in which the ballots were hijacked by a gang of raiders. The court is still to rule on the fate of the ballots cast in that district.

Many other ballot boxes are to be opened and the ballots counted. The court's ruling on these may have some bearing on the final tabulation for the office.

The board immediately began tabulating the vote cast in other contests and the final figures are expected to be released tomorrow.

Kentucky Ratifies Repeal; 33rd State

FRANKFORT, Ky., Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Kentucky today became the thirty-third state to formally ratify repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. Its 19 delegates voted unanimously for repeal.

Gov. Ruby Laffoon said repeal means that "we will handle the liquor question as it should always have been handled," urged that temperance be taught, and expressed hope there would be no return of the open saloon.

Hit-Run Suspect Held at Monessen

MONESSEN, Pa., Nov. 27.—(AP.)—After Wilbur Burkhart, 24, of Donora, was killed when his auto was sideswiped by another, police arrested Michael Endrako, 24, of Bellevernon, charged with failing to stop and give aid.

Blessing or Curse Of Saxophone Left to Fancy

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Paul May, Belgian Ambassador, said in an address last night he would leave to individual taste and fancy whether the Belgian invention of the saxophone "is a blessing or curse to humanity."

Discussing the history of Belgian music, including the musical bells of the carillon which have been imported here for "singing towers," the Ambassador spoke of the popularity of the saxophone, which he said was invented a century ago by Adolpe Sax and was used in Belgian military bands long before it was adopted in American jazz.

In defense of the saxophone as adopted to jazz, he said:

"Perhaps it is better than it sounds."

LAWYER SCORES IN BAR CASE

John Wirtzman, attorney defendant in disbarment proceedings in Common Pleas Court, scored today when the first witness called against him failed to identify him as the man who solicited her case after an accident.

The witness was Anna Gardner, Negro, of 9 Diamond square. She told of a "Mr. Wightman" coming to her home and suggesting that she hire an attorney.

She failed, however, to identify Wirtzman as the caller.

Attorney Joseph B. Weddell, of the Berger Building, was arrested charged with subornation to perjury, and Clara Smith, Negro, rear 38 Fernando street, was charged with perjury today by County Detective Frank Ritz on informations sworn to before Alderman Thomas Geary. Weddell was released on his own recognizance and the Smith woman was held under $1,000 bond.

200 Men Called to Work at Homestead

About 200 men were expected to return to work today with the reopening of the armor plate department of the Carnegie Steel Company's Homestead plant. The heating furnaces and plate mills have been prepared to turn out orders received through the government's re-employment program.

PINCHOT'S WIFE SPEAKS IN OHIO

International News Service.

MARTINS FERRY, O., Nov. 27.—Cornelia Bryce Pinchot, crusading wife of Pennsylvania's Governor, today was back in the Keystone state after crossing the border to urge unionization of steel industry employes at a large gathering of men here.

Several hundred steel workers from Martins Ferry, Wheeling, Yorkville and other regional territories assembled to hear Mrs. Pinchot recommend complete unionization among their group, and then turn her guns on the large operators.

She charged the labor policies of many of the outstanding steel executives were anti-social, and declared success of the recovery movement rests partly on the outcome of the workers' demands for collective bargaining.

Mrs. Pinchot pictured briefly the breadth of Pennsylvania's investigation of "sweatshop" conditions in Keystone state factories.

Sheppard Predicts Bootlegging Growth

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(INS.)—A prediction that repeal will aggravate rather than solve the bootlegging and racketeering problems was made today by Senator Sheppard (Dem.), of Texas, co-author of the ill-fated Eighteenth Amendment. He said:

"The racketeer will dominate retail distribution of liquor in the big cities. Repeal will intensify the difficulties of law enforcement. The wets have a tremendous responsibility in seeking to work out solutions for the new regime."

Blue Eagle Dropped By 17 Restaurants

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa., Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Asserting continued compliance with the NRA would ruin them financially, proprietors of 17 restaurants have decided to surrender their Blue Eagles. Some of the restaurateurs already have taken down their NRA signs.

All of them are members of the Chambersburg Restaurant Owners' Association, which was formed at the time the restaurant code became effective.

Estimate Overholt Tax at 5 Million

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 27.—Tax on liquor in stock at the warehouses of the Overholt distillery here would amount to $5,000,000 under the $2 per gallon floor tax, it was learned today.

Payment is required within 90 days. There are 50,000 barrels, or 2,500,000 gallons in warehouses. The plant closed last week after previously announcing operating schedule of 300 working days with capacity production of 15,600 gallons daily.

CHURCH GLASS, HELD STOLEN; RETURNED

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—The New York Times quotes Lucien J. DeMotte, art dealer, as saying he is in complete accord with the action of William Randolph Hearst, who wrote him concerning the return of medieval stained glass windows purchased from the dealer, and if the glasses originally "were stolen," of course they must be sent back.

An inquiry has been in progress in Paris regarding two windows alleged by French authorities to have been removed from an ancient church at Fecamp.

TELLS OF PURCHASE

Mr. Hearst has made public a letter, dated November 20, from San Simeon, Cal., to the dealer, in which he said he had purchased glasses from him in 1929 out of a public exhibition. Mr. Hearst wrote:

"I understand that some question has been raised about the authenticity or the proper possession of some stained glass which I bought from you in 1929.

"I bought this glass out of a public exhibition in your showrooms, which was not only open to the public but was described and reviewed in the newspapers.

"No expert of the many who saw the glass discovered anything questionable about it, and I certainly was not aware of anything questionable, and have no means of knowing now what is wrong with the glass, if anything.

"Nevertheless, I would prefer not to retain any object about which there is any legitimate question either as to authenticity or propriety of possession.

"You will understand my desire to be scrupulous in such matters, and you will doubtless yourself wish to clear this question up to the complete satisfaction of all concerned.

"I am returning the glass to you.

"Sincerely yours,
"W. R. HEARST."

DEALER AGREES

The dealer said yesterday:

"I have not yet received the letter, but I am in complete accord with Mr. Hearst's action.

"If they were stolen, of course they must be sent back.

"I bought these windows about four years ago from photographs sent to me by my Paris branch, but had no knowledge of their provenance other than that they came from a reputable dealer."

The dealer said he did not know the woman glazier charged by the French investigators with replacing the windows, but did know of her business standing.

The procedure to be followed in returning the windows, he said, would be worked out by his attorney.

SUBSTITUTION BARED

PARIS, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—The magistrate who investigated the substitution of new stained glass for the thirteenth century panes in Fecamp Abbey quotes Marguerite Hure, an expert commissioned to restore the windows, as telling him she copied four panels and sold the originals to a dealer for about 40,000 francs ($2,480).

Police previously reported that two old glass windows from the abbey were in the possession of an American, to whom they were sold by antique dealers for $5,200 each, and that two others were found in the home of a dealer, copies of all four having been cleverly substituted for the original.

The Wail of the Big City

It's the kind of a sound you feel, but never hear . . . It whistles over your head as you turn a corner . . . And it slips up on you from subway holes . . . I mean the Wail of the Big City . . . I've never been able to distinguish it from the million other noises that jam themselves into the clamor of New York . . . That pound at you from the open windows of dance palaces and from the roar of the trembling curbs . . . That turn you, twist you, and jerk your head upwards in neck-cracking blows . . . But it's there just the same . . . And it has a suddenness that makes it all the more dreadful . . . I've seen its effects on roysterers . . . I've seen it swoop into gala repent-houses and shock them into a barren hush of overturned gin bottles and rouge-stained cigaret stubs . . . Laughter is the first to wither before its unseen darts . . . Occasionally it brings tears . . . I think it would bring them more often, but you can't cry in the face of its eerie movements.

Last night it came to me over the telephone . . . "I've simply got to see you, Paul" . . . It was an old friend . . . For 20 years, he has been confecting the songs that have come to you across the footlights and over the air . . . "I'm going nuts, I can't sleep," he pleaded. "Please get dressed and come over right away" . . . You can't ignore the Big City's Wail . . . So, I dressed and hurried to his apartment that crowns a 52-story skyscraper . . . From the heights the whole island spreads out before you . . . You could see the Hudson and the East River dividing to make room for Manhattan and then converging again into the waters of the bay . . . To the south the Statue of Liberty gleamed before its arc-lights, and to the north the haze rectangle of Central Park, and its winding lights loomed like a vast pin-cushion . . . "I can't sleep, and Lord knows when I will be able to again" . . . His eyes were heavy and his hair disheveled by sleepless pillows . . . "Listen, kid. You've got to tell me what to do! . . . I tried to stay away from her for four years . . . I went to Switzerland . . . I went to China . . . I even tried to fly across the Atlantic last summer . . . I thought I could beat it with work . . . There's 12 hit songs on the piano that I've turned out since the day she walked out . . . But it's no use . . . I'm licker, and I'm licked plenty."

The muffled snorts of a dawn-fighting tug on the river punctuated his sobs. "Paul, there's no use, I tell you . . . I can't get her out of my nights, that's the worst part of it . . . Some guys go out and drink . . . Every time I do, it makes my memories more bitter . . . As I was calling you I looked out across that mad carpet below . . . It's exactly midnight . . . There's plenty of gaiety down there . . . Look at that electric bonfire . . . Broadway, eh . . . How many birds are squirming in and out of the speaks to take the knots out of their system? . . . There must be 10,000 of them right now . . . But I can't get consolation out of the thought . . . It reminds me of the night I got drunk after they buried my mother . . . It was a dreary afternoon and I phoned Margie at the theater where she was playing a matinee . . . I told her the chauffeur would pick her up immediately after the show and rush her to the cemetery in time for the final services . . . But she didn't show up . . . I waited out there in Cypress Hills as they lowered my mother from sight . . . And for two full hours afterwards . . . I couldn't believe that Margie would forget me at a time like that . . . Her excuse later that evening was that traffic had delayed the car . . . But the chauffeur couldn't keep silent . . . And told me the truth . . . He had called for her at the stage door and her leading man got in with her . . . Then they stopped at his apartment and were up there for three hours . . . That was the traffic, Paul.

"You know the songs I've written since . . . And you know how crazy people say I am . . . But you can't go telling everybody what's tearing you apart inside . . . All they want to hear is the popular melodies about mildly aching hearts and the concerts of waterfalls set to lyrics that make you blush every time you think of your schooling . . . I've written myself in, and out, and around every emotion I've ever had . . . But you can't stop the moon, especially when it's the same moon that made you deliriously happy in the early days of a romance . . . Anyway I had to go to see her early yesterday morning . . . She's living on 54th St. by herself . . . And I've found myself walking past her house for no good reason at all, at least a dozen times a week . . . You know she's tortured me by refusing to get a divorce . . . So, I felt the devil with it . . . A man has the right to break in on his wife any time he feels like it! . . . It was 3 o'clock this morning . . . I rang the bell, and she opened the door. When she saw me, she closed it quickly . . . Then I heard some heated conversation, and a minute later she came back and invited me in . . . There was a fellow with her; he is one of the best known dramatic critics in town . . . I yelled at him . . . I told him off plenty . . . Then I ordered him out of the house and he left meekly . . . All the time she was grinning at the scene from a deep-cushioned chair . . . As he stepped through the door she called him a coward . . . 'Afraid of a husband?' was her parting taunt . . . I lifted the glass covering off her boudoir table and flung it across the room . . . Then I rushed down the hall to the elevator to catch up with the guy."

Motorcycle sirens tore through the avenue . . . And I could see the re-born rage that their shrill C's brought to his face . . . "I cornered the bird in the vestibule of a drug store . . . I was so mad I wanted to choke him, but he threw an umbrella he carried between us . . . I smashed it to the ground and a crowd began to gather . . . The poor sap was shaking, but I could see him gradually pulling his poise together . . . 'Wait a minute,' he said . . . 'I can't make your wife love you any more than you can . . . It isn't my fault . . . All I happen to be is the guy you found in your wife's apartment at 3 a. m.' . . . And then, Paul, he said something that's haunted me all day . . . 'Look here, fellow,' he continued, 'Don't forget this is a Big City . . . It's so big that time has nothing to do with evil . . . The greatest infidelities are accomplished in the shade-drawn afternoon . . . Just because you found me there this time of day means nothing . . . absolutely nothing' . . . I actually apologized to him . . . And walked away . . . But I can't help feeling the clinging misery . . . She sat there grinning . . . The broken glass at the wall beside her . . . The dame whom I can't forget . . . Do something for me, Paul . . . Talk to me, tell me I'm crazy."

The Wail of the Big City rushed silently in from the terraced roof . . . It smacked me coldly in the face . . . I couldn't talk . . . I only saw dawn coming over the Atlantic.

HOLLYWOOD -:- Studio Gossip Combined With Notes About Local Theaters -:- AMUSEMENTS

Miss Harding Aids Stage Group

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 27.—The mystery of Ann Harding's latest disappearance from Hollywood—until a few days ago, not even the studio knew where she was—has been solved. The blonde star was up in Carmel devoting herself to her old love, the Little Theater.

Miss Harding

This picturesque coast town, long a favorite with artists and writers, probably will see Ann behind the footlights within the next few weeks. The star will go back to help with the production of A. A. Milne's "Mr. Pim Passes By" and she is willing to take a part if they want her to. Moreover, she intends to permanently identify herself with the Little Theater in Carmel.

All of which will be bad news to the Hedgerow Players, in Rose Valley, Pennsylvania, where the actress usually returns once a year to work under her old director.

The star is going around these days with her ankle tightly wrapped with bandages. As an Army post child she was kicked by a horse and still suffers recurring trouble from the bruised ligaments.

As James Dunn tells it, an actor friend failed to keep an appointment at the studio for gallery photographs. That afternoon an executive called the player's wife. She listened for a moment, then snapped:

"You're squawking just because he didn't show up for pictures. What I want to know is why he didn't show up for breakfast!"

Lupe Velez has been seeing that Johnny Weissmuller stays home nights by the simple expedient of talking to him for hours on the telephone. But what Lupe doesn't know is that there is only one line going into the little town of Cameron, Ariz., and that her conversations with her "Darleeng Johnny" have been overheard by most of the population.

Miss Velez

If Lee Tracy's Hollywood troubles don't straighten out, the actor can have one of a dozen Broadway plays. And although Isabel Jewell has just been signed to a contract by M-G-M, my guess is she would chuck her opportunity and go to New York with "Peck's Bad Boy" of the movies.

Dorothy Lee and Marshall Duffield are going to Salt Lake City for three reasons: Because Dorothy has a personal appearance offer; because the trip will be a belated honeymoon, and because Marshall's people live there. Surprising how many remedies there are for whooping cough. Since my story that baby LeRoy had been exposed to the disease, Paramount has received more than 50 letters from local mothers, and now a Chicago medicated air machine company wants to hire an airplane and fly out free of charge. Fortunately, Baby LeRoy hasn't coughed yet.

Did you know: That James Cagney, killer of the films, will not shoot a bird or catch a fish, and that he is a confirmed anti-vivisectionist?

Colleen Moore, out of films for a long time, returns to the screen in "The Power and Glory," playing opposite Spencer Tracy. It will open its first-run engagement in the Family Theater Tuesday.

Her Own Rest Room

Plays and Players :: By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

The Nixon theater is without a tenant this week, but it will be occupied next week by Eva Le Gallienne, who has not visited Pittsburgh in several seasons, her last appearance here having been in two Ibsen plays in the Pitt. Her first appearance next week will not be on the Nixon stage but in the ballroom of the Hotel William Penn at 3 o'clock in the afternoon of Monday, December 4. At that time she will speak, under the auspices of the Drama League of Pittsburgh, her topic to be ideas and ideals pertaining to the theater. In an interview in Baltimore last week Miss LeGallienne deplored the fact that few young people knew anything about the legitimate stage and expressed the idea that there should be a subsidized theater, organized audiences and the creation of "the habit of beauty—especially among children." She believes that it all can be brought about through the interest of women's clubs. The plays to be presented next week by Miss LeGallienne's Civic Repertory Theater Company will include "Alice in Wonderland," with Josephine Hutchinslon as Alice, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights and Wednesday and Saturday matinees; "Romeo and Juliet," with Miss LeGallienne as Juliet, Thursday and Friday nights, and Ibsen's "Hedda Gabler," with Miss LeGallienne in the title role, Saturday night.

Mrs. Florenz Ziegfeld (Billie Burke) is credited with being the sponsor of the new edition of "Ziegfeld Follies," that is booked for the Nixon the week of December 11. The revue opened recently in Boston, where it received praise from the critics and fine patronage from the public. Fannie Brice, whose "My Man" was a dramatic feature of a "Follies" of a day in the past; Willie and Eugene Howard and Patricia Bowman, premiere ballerina of Radio City, are among the stars of the large company, which continues the Glorified Girls tradition. The production was supervised by Bobby Connolly.

Having completed work in "Mandalay," Kay Francis goes back into the all-star cast of "Wonder Bar," replacing Genevieve Tobin . . . Fifi D'Orsay has also been assigned an important role in this musical . . . Metro will film "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," but not with Katharine Cornell, who refuses to go Hollywood . . . Warners have signed Joel McCrea for one of the lead male roles opposite Barbara Stanwyck in "Gambling Lady," in which Pat O'Brien has the other lead . . . Metro has taken up Alice Brady's option and the comedienne will be seen next in "It Happened One Day" . . . Pat Patterson, English stage actress, has been signed to a picture contract by Fox.

Tomboy

Janet Gaynor plays a tomboy role—Paddy, her name—in "Paddy, the Next Best Thing," which the Fulton will offer Wednesday, with Warner Baxter co-featured.

Cinderella's Rivals in Movie

At last, the fairy-book secret of the strength of Cinderella's competition for the glass slipper has been uncovered. According to legend, there were many competitors for the dainty slipper but no definite number ever was mentioned. So, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has definitely placed the figure at 30.

In Marion Davies' new Cosmopolitan picture, "Going Hollywood," a jingling, contagious musical number is called "Cinderella's Fella." It is one of six catchy tunes written for Miss Davies by Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed and in it the blonde film star is Prince Charming, or Cinderella's Fella.

The number is presented in an entrancing Fairyland setting, a great and graceful window commanding a view upon the misty spires of the land of Make-Believe. It is before this vista, upon a window-seat more than 100 feet in length where the duchesses of the kingdom seek to fit the tiny slipper upon their feet.

Of duchesses, there are 30, each a member of the Albertina Rasch ballet. The gowns they wear represent one of the most ambitious costume achievements in pictures. Of medieval style, each was designed by Adrian, noted designer now at M-G-M, and together they represent four weeks of labor by 35 wardrobe mistresses.

All of the costumes are of panne velvet, of varying hues. Many are adorned with white fox fur and all are elaborately trimmed with sequins, spangles, beads, pearls and gold and silk hand embroidery.

Directed by Raoul Walsh, "Going Hollywood," besides an amusing story by Donald Ogden Stewart, presents six colorful musical numbers, all composed by Brown and Freed and several sung by Bing Crosby, who supports Miss Davies. The cast also includes Fifi D'Orsay, Stuart Erwin, Ned Sparks, Patsy Kelly, The Radio Rogues and Bobby Watson.

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

Greatest Of 'Em All.

IF IT accomplished nothing else, the current theatrical season would always be remembered by me for one particular thing. It established George M. Cohan as the head man in the American theater. Those who only suspected it before are admitting it openly now.

In "Ah, Wilderness!" the very excellent Eugene O'Neill opus at the Guild Theater, Cohan gives such a performance as it has never before been my pleasure to witness.

I don't know whether you're fully aware of the fact—but George M. Cohan has been the actual symbol of Broadway for many and many a year.

There never lived a guy quite like this Cohan, and, when he goes, we'll wait a long while before we find anyone to approach him.

Cohan can write. He can compose. He can sing. He can dance. He can speak beautifully. He can act—and oh, brothers and sisters, HOW he can act! I would rather have Cohan's ability than that of a thousand Noel Cowards or any other hero of our modern pseudo intelligentsia.

Then, too, the man's private life is a thing of beauty. I have never heard Cohan rapped in any discussion along Broadway.

His charitable deeds are unlimited. The list of those who are dependent upon him is absolutely amazing. He gives almost too lavishly to any cause he considers worthwhile. And what I like best about him is that he keeps very quiet about it all.

All of which leads me to a new Cohan story; one that took place in his dressing room the night before last.

George has a Japanese valet whom he calls Mike. What the man's real name is I have no idea.

Mike, of course, is always in Cohan's dressing room. And through the years, he has seen and listened to thousands of people who come backstage after a performance to shake hands with Cohan and tell him what a great little feller he is.

The other night in stepped a visitor from Bangor, Me. How he got in, George doesn't know yet.

"Well, well, well!" cried the visitor. "Good old George! I certainly am glad to see you again. You remember me, don't you? Grimpson. Ben Grimpson, from Bangor, Me. Remember me now?"

Cohan nodded warmly.

"I certainly do," he returned. "And I sure am glad to see you again. Been years since we met, hasn't it?"

"Yes, indeed," enthused the other man. "At least ten, I think. But you haven't changed a bit, George. I congratulate you from the bottom of my heart."

This went on for some five minutes, the visitor congratulating Cohan, and the actor thanking Mr. Grimpson. Eventually, with a final handshake that almost wrenched Cohan's arm, the visitor left.

George turned to his Jap valet.

"Mike," he murmured wearily, "this is a strange business I'm in. Very, very strange."

"Why," asked the valet.

George shrugged his shoulders.

"It's because I have to be such a terrible liar," he explained. "When it comes to speaking to people like that in my dressing room, I can't insult them. So what happens? I become a terrible liar."

Mike placed a fresh makeup towel on the table.

"Maybe so," he stated. "But did you hear how man just gave you big compliments?"

Cohan swung around in his chair.

"Sure," he replied. "What about it?"

The valet smiled easily.

"Well, boss," he murmured, "you mustn't forget this about people who come in dressing room to see you. Sometimes they terrible liars, too!"

Human Doormats Can Stage Successful Comebacks

Should we respect doormats?

Should we honor people who haven't honored themselves—who haven't had spunk enough to keep their lives from becoming stupid, and sour and meaningless?

A "Distracted Mother" wondered,

"After all my years of service, when I never had a thought outside my home, what has made my family so callous?"

We told her she had.

Dear Elsie:

I have just read a letter in your column from a woman who gave her whole life for her family, and who was not appreciated. And I want to know how a woman like that can change things.

I am writing for a friend who is just like that. What can she do to cease being a "doormat?" Her whole life has been spent trying to make her family comfortable, with no thought of self. And yet, in answering this other woman who wrote to you, you say "why should her husband be grateful to a door-mat, or respect her if she is one?"

Well, why shouldn't he? Hasn't she earned gratitude by her unselfishness? This friend of mine is crying her heart out because her family doesn't appreciate her. She is terribly unhappy over the way she is ignored, and treated like she just didn't count, after all she has done.

What can she do to remedy this?

She has always worked for other people, with no thought of herself. But must she lose love and respect, because she has given herself so freely? If so—why? JUDITH.

INEVITABLE CONSEQUENCE

Why aren't door-mats respected, after they've led such "beautiful lives?"

Because door-mats don't lead beautiful lives. They lead vicious lives—shameful lives.

It isn't beautiful to "never have a thought outside your home. It isn't noble to grind the spirit God gave you into the slime of the kitchen sink and the soot of the kitchen stove. Yes, I know. Housework is hard work. One grows so weary—so discouraged—so dull!

But no woman has a right to become so dull that she loses her self-respect.

And the day she loses her self-respect she will inevitably lose the respect of everyone who knows her.

We try to pity household drudges, but secretly we all despise them—and we should despise them. They're slackers! They've given up the fight—that long fight for decency which has lifted humanity out of the mire.

"But they do it for their families."

CAN BE AVOIDED

No they don't. They do it because they're lazy and cowardly—because it is easier to give up than it is to fight—because it is easier to wallow in self-pity than it is to think and act.

There never was a household drudge who couldn't have lightened that drudgery if she wished, or walked out on it! And though her family might have stormed at first, they would have thanked her for it in the end. For there's nothing deadlier to live with than a woman who hasn't a thought outside her home and is always whining about it.

But what can such a woman do about it? She can do what she should have done in the beginning. She can stop wailing and get busy; begin to make some interests for herself. Cut out the fussy desserts, the cakes and pies. Make daughter iron her own lacy undies. Make son get on the business end of the kitchen mop.

Let the family hustle its own dinner, while she treats herself to a round of window-shopping, a marcel and manicure and a new winter hat.

Then invite them to take her to the movies—and if they won't, go alone!

Can the doormat stage a comeback?

She certainly can—if she has what it takes!

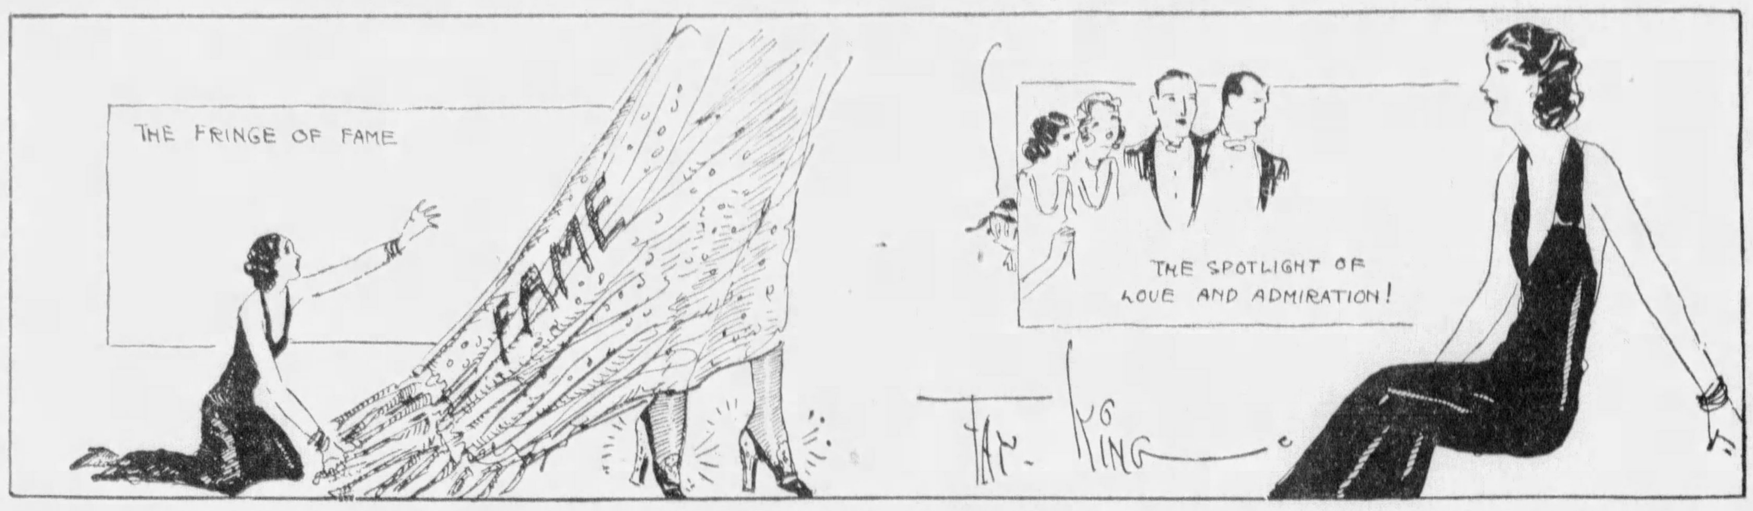
"The Glamour of Fame Is Like a Drug," Declares Fay King



By FAY KING

The glamour of Fame is like a drug, and addicts of it would rather be clutching hopelessly to the last thread of its magic garment than enjoying peace and comfort in quiet places.

They prefer the fringe of fame among the mighty to the spotlight of love and affection in lesser circles.

Those who have once stood in the full power of Fame's brilliant light refuse to budge from the last and faintest beam of its fading after-glow.

They will not believe that they can ever become less.

And, alas, so much that seems like success is only a kind of failure. Too many have forgotten the great price paid for achievement in the exaggerated prestige of the little it really amounts to.

Avis Arlen Objects to Wedding Color Scheme

As Lillian asked me if it were too early to get hold of Avis Arlen, I felt the shrinking which always seizes me when I have a particularly distasteful task on hand.

"In the old days she used to sleep until about noon," I said, "but now that she is a working girl, she probably arises about this time. It's worth a trial, anyway."

Lillian nodded, and I proceeded to the task of getting Avis Arlen on the telephone. She was living, I noted, at an apartment hotel, which I knew was beyond the purses of people in such dire straits as Avis had represented her mother and herself to be in, but I took no time to consider that angle of the situation. I was glad, instead, of the prompt service which enabled me to get the girl at the other end of a telephone at the almost record-breaking time.

"Mrs. Graham?" she cooed sleepily, "and this early? Has anything happened"—her voice sharpened—"to No-el?"

"No, there is nothing wrong with any of us," I said.

"Have you heard anything more from Uncle Phil about—you know what—better not say it over the telephone?"

"Yes. He does not believe what I told him, and he is going to tax you with the—the act that was yours. But I stuck very closely to the story and you stick to yours, too. Above everything, do not admit anything. If you remember that, you will be all right, I am sure. But I have something pleasanter to tell you."

THE BRIDESMAID

"Oh, lovely fun!" she gurgled.

"I hope you'll like it," I said, making an extra effort to be polite because of the intense dislike I felt for my errand and for the girl to whom I was talking. "Mr. Veritzen said last night that you had a great desire to be a bridesmaid, and he asked Mary if she would let you attend her?"

I expected another gurgle and further exclamation of joy, but instead there came a sharp question.

"What did she say?"

"She said that she would be delighted to have you as an attendant," I sail mendaciously.

"And No-el? What did he say? Her voice was sharper still.

I made my own voice casual to the extreme.

"Nothing at all, as any well-trained bridegroom should." I gave a little disdainful laugh. "Men are so useless at weddings, don't you think? Yet there really couldn't be one without them."

I had given her time to recover herself, and it was with her old gushing effusion that she answered me.

"But how perfectly wonderful it all is! I shall be too happy for words. I wonder if Uncle Phil would be willing to let me off from the office for these two days. I suppose I ought to come right down to the farm and stay for rehearsals, oughtn't I?"

SUGGESTS OWN GOWN

I was glad that I had a weapon against her effrontery, for I knew of old how persistent she could be in trying to gain her point.

"That was the message of which I spoke a moment ago, Mr. Veritzen says that you do not need to come to the office again until the wedding is over, but you will not be able to come to the farm until day after tomorrow, the day of the wedding."

"Why not?" Her voice was curt to rudeness.

"Because of your gown," I explained patiently. "You see, Mary had planned for but one attendant, Marion. Then when Mr. Veritzen suggested you, she decided at once to have Carolyn Brixton also."

"But she'll look awful with me, she's so much shorter than I."

"That can be obviated, I think, by having you walk singly," I told her. "But that is beside the mark. We have planned your gowns to tone in with Marion's rose pink one, and we want you to meet Mrs. Brixton this morning at the dressmaking establishment."

"Oh, but I can't afford to buy a new gown; and I have a perfectly scrumptious pale green and silver that came from Paris last year, and that I've only worn once. It would be just the thing."

Household Hints

Do you ever give yourself a mean little puncture when you are looking through your sewing basket and a finger encounters the tip of the scissors? This need never happen if you keep a small cork on the end of the scissors.

For safety's sake, ladders should be placed at an angle of 75 degrees.

Put all kitchen utensils to soak as soon as emptied.

Fashion Flashes

By ALICE ALDEN

You will find purple velvet becoming to almost every type, if the purple is dull and dark. A new dinner dress in this medium has sleeve sections and bodice in matching lace. There is a draped neckline with flowers of purple velvet and lace and a twisted girdle of velvet.

At least one black and white dress should be in every wardrobe. An excellent choice for general day wear is a model in heavy black bengaline. It has an inset yoke, an Ascot scarf and long, loose cuffs of white bengaline. Button detail marks the side closing.

The tailored note is strongly emphasized in many of the new informal dinner suits. Such a model is done in smoke gray velvet. There is a backless white satin blouse and jeweled clips fasten the coat.

Contract Bridge

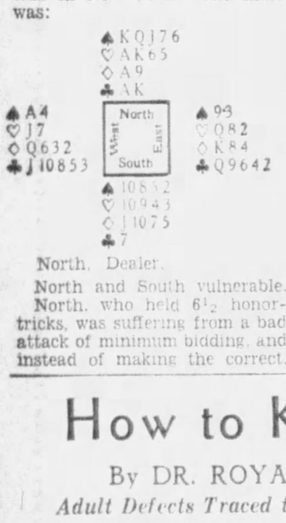
HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

If You Have a Two-Bid, Make It

The pendulum has swung far in the last few years in Contract Bridge. There are many players who now open any biddable hand, regardless of its strength, with a bid of one, depending upon partner or opponents to keep the bidding open and give them a chance, on later rounds, to show the strength they hold. This is an absolutely mistaken policy. If the Opening Hand contains the honor strength and distribution to justify an Opening bid of two in a suit, then that bid should be made, not only to assure another chance to bid but to guarantee that the bidding will not reach a height where an unmakable contract is undertaken if partner responds. Forcing Opening bids should not be made on doubtful hands, but they should always be made on hands in which a free response cannot reasonably be expected from partner.

A hand which gives point to this homily was played recently in the experts' room at a bridge club in New York. The hand was:



North, Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.

North, who held 6½ honor-tricks, was suffering from a bad attack of minimum bidding, and instead of making the correct, obvious and natural bid of two spades decided to open with the bid of one spade. Fortunately, the partner, without a semblance of honor-tricks in his hand, found justification for a Raise to two spades on the basis of the distribution. At that point North felt that there were bigger and better things in store and made a Forcing Takeout of four hearts. South, indicating merely a preference, now bid four spades, and North, with no information whatever as to honor strength, felt forced to bid six spades. This bid was doubled and the contract was set 2 tricks, there being absolutely no way to avoid the loss of a spade, a heart and a diamond.

Consider for a moment how much more reasonably and intelligently the bidding would have progressed if North, instead of opening with the inadequate bid of one spade, had bid two spades. South would have responded with two no-trump, holding no honor-tricks whatever, and North would have bid three hearts, to which South would have responded with three spades. In this case the Opening bidder would have been content wisely and correctly to play the hand at four spades and thus, instead of having a minus score of 500 chalked up against him, have made game and rubber.

The moral of this story is simple. It is almost as dangerous to open with the bid of one when your hand justifies the Opening bid of two as it is to open with the bid of two when the hand should be opened with an Approach bid of one in a suit.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Opening the Gifts

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When having a shower, is it correct for the bride-to-be to open all her gifts and show them to all the guests that are present? K.

It is the natural thing for the bride-to-be to open each gift as it is given to her, or as she takes it from the box of gifts, thank the giver for it, and say some appreciative and admiring things about it. It isn't that she makes a point of "showing" the gifts, but that naturally, as she opens the gifts, the other guests are interested and, with her, admire the gifts.

New Home

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Some people we know moved into a new apartment. Is it proper for them to call us up and let us know how they are getting along, or should we call them, not knowing their telephone number? B.

It would be very friendly and gracious for you to call these friends to see how they are progressing in their new home. It would probably be easy to find out the telephone number, or, if this isn't possible, maybe you would like to write a little note of friendly interest and good wishes for their new home.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Adult Defects Traced to Neglected Childhood Ills

Many of the ailments and physical deformities of adult life can be traced to the neglect of disorders in childhood. No one will deny that if the general health of children is guarded they will grow up to be healthier and happier citizens. Chronic diseases will decrease in frequency, and many disorders now commonly seen in middle life will no longer be encountered; this will be the happy result when every child is protected and cared for as he should be.

Dr. Copeland

For example, if proper attention is given to the eyes, ears and teeth of school children, many physical defects can be corrected, the health improved, and serious constitutional disorders prevented. If a child does poor work at school, holds the book close when reading, complains of headache, pain and fatigue of the eyes, he should be examined for weakness of those important organs. If necessary, glasses should be prescribed.

Often a child suffers from red or crusted eyelids and no effort is made to remedy the disorder. This symptom may be a sign of eye strain. Glasses may be needed and they should be changed from time to time.

School authorities call attention to faulty hearing as one of the chief causes of backwardness in school work. A child who is a victim of some ear disorder can be saved from permanent deafness or other serious affliction of the ear, if proper attention is given at once.

Sometimes the defective hearing of children is the result of neglected accumulation of wax. This is simple to deal with and on its removal the hearing and health of the child improves at once.

I cannot overemphasize the importance of healthy teeth in children. Many serious disabilities such as rheumatic fever, St. Vitus dance, heart and kidney disease, can be traced to decayed and infected teeth. Too many parents fail to realize that the temporary teeth require the same dental care that should be given the permanent teeth.

In addition to the dangers of infection and lowered resistance of the body to contagious disease, lack of proper dental care may lead to irregularities of the jaws and teeth. These cause disfiguration of the face and faulty chewing of the food.

LATEST SHAW PLAY WINS OVATION

LONDON, Nov. 27. — (AP.) — George Bernard Shaw, the sage from Ireland was given a spontaneous ovation at the opening performance Saturday night of his new play, "On the Rocks," which is as fresh and timely as today's newspaper, although not so closely edited.

Picturing modern England on the verge of a revolution with unemployed persons overrunning the country and finally sweeping through Downing street as the curtain falls, the play reaches a climax more dramatic than the usual Shavian political dissertations for the stage.

As at a political meeting, the audience became so wrapped in the arguments presented in dialogue that shouts of dissent and cries of approval came from the gallery and from stalls filled with a distinguished first night audience.

Shaw beamed from a box during the presentation, but holding a lifelong belief that the stage is for actors and not playwrights he refused to take a curtain call, leaving this honor for Nicholas Hannen, who acted the part of the Prime Minister, and the cast.

The play's whole action takes place around a big green-covered table in the famous cabinet room at No. 10 Downing street. A much-befuddled prime minister of the "National" government and his cabinet are caught in the grip of economic forces beyond their control, and for three and a half hours wrangle and harangue over what is to be done, finally resigning one by one, leaving the premier alone.

He sends his resignation to the King as mobs in Downing street sing "England Arise" hailing the dictatorial government Shaw has advocated.

INDIAN YOUTH SEEKS MOTHER

A Sioux Indian-Spanish youth who said he was kidnaped from Pittsburgh at the age of 3, has written the Missing Persons Bureau to institute a search for his mother.

He is William Moreszes, 17, of Los Angeles. He gave his mother's name as Mrs. Edith Dixon. He said he understood from friends she was living in this district.

The youth stated he was born in Pittsburgh and baptized in St. Paul's Cathedral, but was kidnaped by a Spaniard and taken to the Sioux reservation in the Blach Hills of South Dakota where he grew up. If his mother is in need, he wishes to aid her, he asserted.

Through the Spyglass @ VIEWING THE NEW

This being the beginning of the week, we have shuffled through our notes and picked out an assortment of VERY SPECIAL items for you to start off with! After reading them over you'll agree that they're nothing if not "hot!" For names of the shops, call Grant 6500 and ask for the Spyglass . . . or send a stamped self-addressed envelope.

To do a little reminiscing . . . Not so very long ago we told you about some Japanese crepe tablecloths (breakfast or luncheon size, 50x50), which were then 49c! And NOW when we say that they've descended several points to the new low of 29c . . . we expect to hear about nothing short of a stampede in the direction of the shop which carries them!

Now children . . . we all know that we can't treat chiffon stockings like they were potato sacking . . . yet how many of us rag them 'round in our dresser drawers without a thought to their catching threads or such! All of which leads us to say what's on our mind . . . stocking boxes! And nice ones they are . . . with their outsides covered in suede-like material, red, blue, green, with gold trimmings . . . hexagonal shape . . . and 3 compartments big enough for 2 pairs apiece. 25c . . . and a nicest sort of gift to tuck into an odd corner of the tree.

A beautiful jade . . . and we aren't speaking of a girl either but some pieces we've found made into ash trays, plaques for match boxes, cigaret boxes, and so on. Whole pieces of Soochow jade or Chinese carnelian are fashioned into cigaret trays . . . with rose quartz balls for feet, and maybe a little carved animal on top. Perfectly exquisite pieces, every one of them . . . and destined to make the snootiest of Christmas gifts! Prices as low as $2.00!

If you ever wanted a good example of a wild woman . . . you should have seen us when we first realized what good fortune there was in town in the form of finger towels for 15c apiece!

Pure handkerchief linen in white or pastel shades . . . hand embroidered initials . . . white or pastel shades . . . and fringed! Hand someone a half-dozen of these for Christmas and they'll think you're Santa himself!

There must have been a blue moon this week . . . because it's only during blue moons that anything like this happens!

Such a thing as a red transparent velvet evening bag . . . a swinging little pouchy fellow hanging from a matching silk cord . . . for $1.

Or such a thing as a woven bead bag of silver, pearl, or crystal beads . . . with a buttoning envelope flap . . . or a zipper fastening going "zoop" around the top. And round ones . . . longish ones . . . little ones . . . bigger ones. Some are even made of white and gold brocade! A great array of evening glitter for you little "buck" passers!

"We're no "shrinking v-i-o-let" . . . but we spend enough time in a flower shop that we wouldn't blame people if they thought we grew there!

But that's how we found that there is a Thanksgiving special now on pompons and other flowers! Featured at 50c the bunch . . . in assorted colors . . . and usually priced (as you should know) around 75c! Also a wonderful mixed bouquet for $1 . . . if you want to do the house proud on Turkey Day!

Yo ho! . . . heave ho! and several more "ho's!" This is little us yodeling off the latest in the line of dress news . . . sport dress news, that is!

One of the hunting grounds we know has gone in cahoots with us and decided to take the old family ax to their prices. With the result . . . that prices which knew their names as $7.95 to $14.95 before . . . are now answering to the call of $3.95 to $7.95 (and liking it!)

And they are an odd lot! Some of them plain, some of them plaid . . . diagonal striped . . . hairy woolens . . . knitted effects . . . and 1-2 or 3-piece models! Colors are just as diversified. Style notes always popping up something new just as you think you've seen all. (Wooden buttons for instance . . . and a gay hand - crocheted ascot!) Thusly it does . . . and thusly you should go if you wear a size 12 to 20.

Don your aprons, ladies . . . you're about to flourish a dish towel! A real linen huck one with a colored border for just nine of your pennies! And think how your cups and saucers would like a brand new one to wash their faces! Only 9c each.

PIN MONEY CLOTHES THAT ARE DECEIVING

By PRUNELLA WOOD

ASK a man what "sweet sixteen" means to him, and he will burst into sentimental song or story. Ask a woman, and she will say "something fit to wear at about that price." She'll be right, too, for although such finds exist, most of them are not on the formal side. Once in a while you run across them, however, and that makes good hunting.

THE vogue for the very feminine dinner gown with a modest front neckline and a very daring back cut-out is one style that one would look for only in higher priced clothes. But they can be had under $20, made with all the subtle "dressmaker" details that make such frocks lovely and to be coveted.

AND smart little outdoor things to get one to a formal party can be found for pin money, too. The short, quaint little dark velvet coats around town are just as pert and cute as the high colored velvet capelets we wore last summer or the little balloon sleeved jackets of taffeta or lame.

They don't have any catch in them which explains the price, such as no interlining. They even have fur, and pretty well bred fur, at that. Not the most blue-blooded, of course, but from rather better families than ever went over a bargain counter before.

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Synd., Inc.)

Red and alluring like the cherry in a cocktail, the dinner frock sketched right. It has a cowled back neckline and swell slit sleeves. Center, a jacketed crepe satin dinner model. Before the mirror a velvet evening coat with silver fox capelet.

Globe-Trotting

—By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN—

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

When the sun came out, the response to our last appeal for sled riding streets melted with the snow. But it's winter again and the little fellow will be wanting to go coasting. So, mamma and papa, you tell him to write, or write me yourself, just what streets you want protected for him.

These are also our famous "feed the birds" days. A few bread crumbs, a little suet, some water in a place swept clean of snow goes a long way with the birdies. Many of the Trotters, who made it a point last winter to care for the birds, were rewarded with cheerful companions all the year around.

It is very significant that after my offer to read the parody on "Two Alabama Wildcats," the name of which is "Two California Goldfish," I didn't receive one letter urging me. So it's not only the radio operators who think my poetry reading is terrible. (Who said, "Why only poetry reading?")

William Petzki, South Side—Those are strange charges that you allege, William. If you have the proof of what you say, will you come downtown to see me?

Listeners Too Indifferent To Answer Radio Quiz

By AIRCASTER

James H. Hanley, who labors as one of the Federal Radio Commissioners, has gazed analytically at radio, and in his consciousness there has materialized a strange and arresting reflection of the industry as an entertainment medium.

Hanley, who is the newest of the commissioners, and not yet entirely disillusioned, is undecided whether to label this picture "contentment," or "apathy."

Curious, as most new officials are, he recently issued an appeal throughout the land, enjoining radio listeners to forward to him suggestions for reform in broadcasting; and a list of complaints and dislikes.

Few Replies

A month elapsed, and Hanley now has at hand, fewer than a hundred responses, though his appeal reached tens of thousands. Of the meager returns, only 15 listeners had complaints to make, and they were the usual lamentations about ballyhoo, monotony, too much religion, and a tendency of the networks to monopoly.

Like most attempted surveys, this one has come to nothing. Hanley is wondering whether the audience is happy and satisfied, or calloused, or merely too apathetic to swamp him with missives.

Womenfolk

Through Mrs. Elmer J. Ottaway, of Port Huron, Mich., the National Council of Women decided to make plain to the radio advertising agencies the tastes for radio programs cherished by their type of femininity.

They don't like crooning, for instance; they despise vulgar songs; jazz doesn't jar them, and they nourish a particular dislike for those wheedling males who "will be with us again next week to take care of our souls and livers."

No Morons

And they want it known and remembered that their type of women are more representative of the buying public than the "minors, maids and morons," whose missives now constitute the bulk of radio fan mail.

SMALL FAMILY'S BIG TURKEY PROBLEM SOLVED BY RECIPE

Prize Winner Offers Casserole Dish as Substitute

If you have a small family and can't possibly use a whole turkey, yet want to retain that holiday spirit for your Thanksgiving dinner, the recipe for Virginia casserole of chicken, Prudence Penny suggests, will just fit in with your needs, without having that air of a not-quite-so-good substitute.

On the same menu, steamed plum pudding will be delicious. And for your muffins, provide variety by using the recipe for squash or pumpkin muffins.

If you have other dishes you prefer, send them in to Prudence Penny, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and perhaps she'll award them the $5 prize or one of the ten $1 prizes awarded daily, and thus make them available to housewives all over the district.

Al Jolson Picks the New Stewart-Warner

Hear it—and you'll understand why Jolson says that his Stewart-Warner "does the job better than any set I've ever had." Yes—the new Stewart-Warner actually recreates studio broadcasts with an accuracy that's nothing short of uncanny. The secret lies in the fact that it's built on the premise that a Radio Set is not a musical instrument alone—its sole function is to duplicate exactly—not impose a tone of its own.

You'll be delighted, too—with the cabinets of the new Stewart-Warner, "Radio of the Stars." Beautiful pieces of Furniture in true period designs.

WHERE IT LIVES—

in the System!

Don't fool yourself about a cold! It's nothing to be taken lightly nor treated lightly. A cold is an internal infection that will quickly spread within the system unless promptly checked. The wise thing to take for a cold is Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine.

First of all, it is distinctly a cold remedy and not a "cure-all." Secondly, it is an internal treatment. Thirdly, it does the four things necessary. It opens the bowels, combats the cold germs and fever in the system, relieves the headache and grippy feeling and tones and fortifies the entire system. That's the treatment a cold requires and anything less is taking chances. All druggists sell Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine, 30c and 50c. Ask for it by the full name and reject a substitute.

SURGERY DEATH 'CONFESSION' REPUDIATED

ently, Judge Schiller ascended the bench and announced:

"The people of the State of Illinois vs. Earle J. Wynekoop."

Silence fell over the courtroom, broken a moment later by Attorney Tyrrell:

"Your honor, I would like to know if the complaint is signed."

An argument between the attorneys ensued as to when the complaint was sworn to, and presently Lieut. Thomas Duffy was sworn in.

He then testified that he had investigated the murder of Rheta Wynekoop, that he was present when Dr. Alice Wynekoop made her statement and that, in his opinion:

"Rheta Wynekoop came to her death as result of shock and hemorrhage due to the bullet wound."

DOCTOR'S STATEMENT

Meanwhile, the arrest of a third possible suspect was indicated with the revelation of an alleged statement by Dr. Wynekoop.

Dr. Wynekoop, mother-in-law of the girl killed last Tuesday while on the operating table, was quoted as having said to a close friend:

"I had to help —— —— out."

Police were informed that the person named had access to the big 16-room Wynekoop house of gloom in which Rheta died and in which Dr. Wynekoop maintained both her home and office.

Those who lived in the house with the 62-year old woman doctor were her son, Earle; the murdered girl, and Miss Enid Hennessey, high school teacher and a lodger there for 10 years.

INDICTMENT SOUGHT

Authorities moved meanwhile to present voluminous evidence before the grand jury in an effort to obtain an indictment against Earle as well as his mother.

The son's "confession," made, he admitted, to save his mother, has been shattered by police confirmation of his original alibi—that he was en route with a friend to Kansas City when Rheta was chloroformed and shot through the back as she lay nude on the operating table.

Dougherty announced that voluminous testimony taken from 17 witnesses was being prepared by stenographers for presentation to the grand jury either tomorrow or Wednesday.

Wynekoop Family Pennsylvania Dutch

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Earle Wynekoop, held as a suspect in the operating room death of his wife, Rheta, commenting on the family name — pronounced "Wine coop"—said it went back to a Judge Dirk Wynekoop, a Dutchman who settled in Pennsylvania before the Revolution. His mother's people, the Lindsays, "are of Scotch extraction and they've been in the states for years, too," he said.

New Mystery Rivals Leopold, Loeb Case

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Police today said the Wynekoop murder case has created more interest than any murder since that of Bobby Franks, by Leopold and Loeb, nine years ago. Dozens of letters and scores of telephone calls have been received from citizens with theories about the case.

DANCE TO AID JEWISH HOME

The twenty-first annual benefit ball for the benefit of the Jewish Home for Babies and Children, Breckenridge street, will be held Wednesday night, December 6, in Syria Mosque.

Various committees are working hard to make the affair a success in order to remedy the desperate financial status of the home.

Mrs. Louis Hamburg is chairman of the ball.

TEACHERS SAY SCHOOLS LAG

A canvass of the countries of the world reveals that schools in the United States have not been safeguarded from the impact of the depression as well as those in most other nations, officials of the Pittsburgh Teachers' Association pointed out today.

They cite a recent report, "The Effects of the Economic Depression in Other Countries," by Dr. James F. Abel, of the Office of Education, Washington.

England, Scotland, France and Australia are among the foreign countries where school programs have not been impaired, according to Dr. Abel's report.

Supporting the Allegheny County Real Estate Owners' and Taxpayers' League in its demand for real estate school tax relief, Miss Esther M. Smith, president of the association, sees the depression, crushing real estate values, as crushing education in turn. She advocates a more equitable distribution of taxes as the only remedy.

LAWYER SLAIN, BEAUTY SOUGHT

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Theory of "mistaken identity" definitely abandoned, police today sought a "young and beautiful Russian woman" for questioning in connection with the slaying of Attorney Aaron Scherwin, 28, and the serious wounding of his bride, Charlotte.

The young woman, according to Detective Lieut. John Osnato, had been friendly with Scherwin before his marriage 11 months ago.

Scherwin was shot to death and his wife wounded last night as they walked home from a party at a friend's residence. Osnato said:

"It is my opinion that Scherwin and his wife were not victims of mistaken identity, but that they were shot down in cold blood."

Police learned, they said, that the young woman for whom they are searching had been "very friendly" with Scherwin, and that some of their acquaintances were surprised when he married the wife who now lies critically wounded.

Scherwin and his wife, who is an expectant mother, were walking home about midnight—arm in arm. Not until they had come out in the full glare of a street lamp were they sprayed with lead, which spat from a revolver in the shadow of an automobile parked at the curb.

DOLL LADY

Is in Pittsburgh Again! This Year She Brings Gorgeous

"HONEY-SUCKLE"

"Honeysuckle" is 18 inches tall, just the right size the average little girl would like to cuddle up to. The word beautiful doesn't really describe her. She's more than beautiful—she's GORGEOUS.

"Honeysuckle" has flexible rubber arms and hands and rubber legs that can be washed just the same as you would wash your baby brother's or sister's. And WHAT A SMILE! And behind that smile are the most lovable, most roguish eyes you ever looked into. They open and close and she rolls them from side to side like a real flirt. By pressing her legs or by moving her body forward or back, she says "Ma-ma" in the sweetest voice you ever heard. She's dressed like a little queen in dainty organdy and lace, with bonnet and shoes to match.

Oh, we forget to mention her cute dimples, and just as this was written "Honeysuckle" looked up and seemed to say, "Yes; you forgot to tell them about my rubber panties."

"Honeysuckle" is really the DOLL OF ALL DOLLS, and she is going to be so easy to get for Christmas. Shall I save a "Honeysuckle" for you?"

MUNHALL WOMEN'S POISON CONVICTIONS UPHELD

CLIFFORD HEINZ SUED AGAIN BY FORMER WIFE

Fails to Support Their Three Children, She Charges

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—A petition on file today in Probate Court alleged that Clifford S. Heinz is failing to provide adequately for his three children.

Mrs. Sarah Young Frazer, his former wife, in filing the papers, asked that she be named guardian of the children, Clifford, Jr., 14; Nancy, 12, and Dorothy, 10.

The two were divorced several years ago. The petition said Heinz has left his winter home in Pasadena and is living in Pittsburgh. Mrs. Frazer lives in Beverly Hills.

Clifford S. Heinz is a son of the late H. J. Heinz, founder of the company bearing his name. The divorce action was brought here by Mrs. Heinz on the grounds of desertion.

Early this year Mrs. Heinz brought an action against Heinz for custody of their three children and an allowance for their support. In June Heinz started a suit to restrain payments to Mrs. Heinz from the income of a $600,000 trust fund.

Mrs. Heinz has twice married since her divorce from Heinz. She married Dr. M. A. Slocum in 1929, whom she divorced in California.

In 1932 she married James P. Frazer.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Nov. 27.

To the Editor Sun-Telegraph:

Just when it looked like Al was going to have his gold argument go by default, why up comes an old country boy from out of the wheat shocks of Idaho, and he takes up what I suppose would be known as the negative side of the dispute. He says "if your gold is so hot, how did we get in the shape we are in?" Well, it's going to require a little thought to answer that one. The gentleman I am about to introduce you to, needs no introduction, it's William E. Borah, and if a man searched the United States over, he couldn't find a more worthy foe to enter into combat with. Al I know you didn't mean to, but you choosed a tough baby. Yours, WILL.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 27.—(INS.)—Blunt charges that United States Senator Huey P. Long threatened him with conviction under the oil production laws unless he contributed $5,000 to the John Overton campaign fund were made today by Sam D. Hunter, wealthy oil man, of Shreveport.

The United States Senate committee investigating the election of Overton over Edwin S. Broussard heard Hunter's charges.

TWO DIE AS ICE COATS ROADS IN COLD SNAP

Winter Blasts Send Mercury Down to 23 Degrees

Two were dead from auto accidents over the week-end as icy highways made motor traffic dangerous and a wintry blast tumbled the mercury 27 degrees to a low mark of 23 at the weather bureau.

Rain, followed by sleet and snow, froze as the temperature fell yesterday, coating highways with ice. The State Highway Department had crews cindering grades and curves in the mountain districts throughout last night. State engineers reported roads east as passable, but risky where there was no cinder protection.

The Pittsburgh Motor Club reported heavy snowfall on roads west of Pittsburgh and a "sheet of ice" on roads east through the mountains.

AUTO SKID FATAL

Slightly warmer weather was predicted for tonight, followed by rain and colder tomorrow.

Virginia Demick, 21, of 910 Mifflin avenue, Wilkinsburg, died in Columbia Hospital early today of a skull fracture suffered when struck by an automobile at Henrietta street and South Braddock avenue last night.

Drew Burkhard, 1901 Wayne street, Swissvale, driver of the car, told police Miss Demick walked in front of the auto and it skidded when he applied the brakes.

David Evans, 50, died yesterday after he was struck by an automobile near his home, 1221 Main street, Sharpsburg, according to a police report. The automobile was driven by the Rev. Father Andrew J. Zapora, assistant pastor of Old St. Patrick's Church, according to the report.

The priest took the victim to St. Francis Hospital where both the victim's legs were amputated in an effort to save his life, police said.

Two persons were injured in an accident at Bigelow boulevard and Kirkpatrick street last night, in which three cars were involved. Mrs. Jennie Pelky, 40, of 705 Church street, Turtle Creek, was injured yesterday when a car driven by her husband, William Pelky, collided with another at Penn avenue and Wood street, Wilkinsburg, it was reported.

Ann Griffith, 21, of Keystone street, New Kensington, was injured last night when a car driven by her escort, Arthur Stroyd, of Freeport road, New Kensington, struck another automobile at Baum boulevard and Melwood street, according to a police report. The other car was driven by William Dowler, of Swissvale avenue, Edgewood.

BOULEVARD COLLISION

Reed, of Montour avenue, and Edward Tolouse, of Thirtieth street, collided in Baum boulevard near Melwood street, according to police. DETROIT GANG 'RUBS OUT' 2

DETROIT, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Police searched the Detroit area and surrounding counties today for the men who early Sunday shot to death Abe Axler and Edie Fletcher, members of the once-powerful Purple Gang. The bodies of the two victims were found slumped in the rear seat of an automobile on a lonely road.

The men apparently had been slain by two other men with whom they were riding. Police had no description of the slayers nor any other tangible clues to aid in their investigation of Detroit's first underworld execution in more than a year.

Prosecutor Harry S. Toy said the men probably were slain for double-crossing their companions in the narcotic ring.

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

In 1918 victory came by attribution. In 1933 we seem to have peace by exhaustion.

Listen to the battle cry of the European premier. "My country cannot afford war."

That doesn't mean he doesn't want it.

Uncle Sam can't stand treat this time. The last one was on him.

It's just too bad that Europe cannot afford to fight. We will ask the school children to save their pennies.

Those lads over there have enough chips on their shoulders to start a forest fire.

They cannot afford it now. But don't let anybody tell you they ain't coming to a slow boil.

Can't Find Bustle For Style Review

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Society chairmen of the fashion show, annual feature of a welfare bazar, are becoming perturbed. Part of the show is to be devoted to a review of styles of the last 100 years.

Hoop skirts, ruffles, loops and other odd creations have been turned in galore, but try as they will, chairmen have been unable to find one of those distinctive appendages—a bustle.

CARNEGIE AIDE DIES IN N. Y.

Col. Henry P. Bope, 75, once one of Andrew Carnegie's partners in the steel business, died Saturday in New York.

His body will be brought to the T. B. Moreland funeral home, North Highland avenue and Rippey street, where services will be held Wednesday at 3 p. m.

Col. Bope was active in the steel industry in Pittsburgh at the time of its greatest development. He was first employed by Carnegie Brothers & Co. as a stenographer, and advanced steadily, becoming a Carnegie partner shortly before the formation of the United States Steel Corporation.

When he retired about 12 years ago he was vice president of the Carnegie Steel Company in charge of commercial affairs.

He was active in boys' brigade work in Pittsburgh.

He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Wheeler B. Horner, of Thornburg, and a son, Harold F. Bope, of Detroit.

Autoist Paroled In Woman's Death

George Crosby, 25, of 11 Vine street, Etna, was paroled for a year in Criminal Court today after pleading guilty to involuntary manslaughter in the death of Mrs. Bella Simons, 64, of 1302 Bailey avenue, McKeesport.

Crosby pledged to pay $1,750 to dependents of Mrs. Simons, a widow, which was made a condition of his parole. His car struck the widow last July 14 at Shetland avenue and Washington boulevard. She died the same day in Pittsburgh Hospital.

LUCKY TO GET LIFE, COURT DECLARES

Supreme Bench Finds Insurance Plotters' Sentences Just

The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, sitting in Philadelphia, today refused to grant the Munhall poison plotters a new trial.

The court's opinion declared the women were "fortunate."

Mrs. Mary Chalfa and Mrs. Anna Allas, it ruled, must serve life for the poisoning of the latter's step-son, Stephen Allas, 12.

Both women had been given sentences of life imprisonment, a jury having found them guilty of poisoning the boy September 2, 1931.

LUCKY TO GET LIFE

The court's opinion stated:

"These defendants were fortunate, since the jury, under the testimony, could very properly have fixed the death penalty for what the court below described as a cruel, outrageous and inhuman crime."

The poisoning was held by the court to be "essential to the pyramiding of insurance, defendent on a beginning with the funds obtained as a result of the primary homicide."

At the time it was charged also that they poisoned Andrew Allas, 15, and a baby, Richard Duyava, and collected life insurance on the victims. A total of $20,000 was carried on the three.

The trial was held and both were convicted in March and new trials were refused.

CHEMICAL TESTS

Their innocence or guilt rested on the chemical tests made by County Chemist F. C. Buckmaster, who testified that poison was discovered in the bodies of the boys. The bodies were exhumed upon orders of the court to furnish the analysis.

The women told, as part of their defense, of the "spell" that had been cast over them by Mrs. Gizella Young, alleged fortune teller, of Homestead. But Mrs. Young denied their charges, and became the state's star witness.

Chemists also testified that the poison traces found in the body of Stephen might have been obtained by other means than administration by the women. But the jury found them guilty of first degree murder. Judge F. Grank Graff sentenced them to the State Industrial Home for Women at Muncy, Pa.

APPEAL ARGUED

Assistant District Attorney John F. Haggerty, for the state, and Louis Little, for the women, argued the latter's appeal before the Supreme Court.

Little charged that the judge erred in permitting testimony regarding the alleged poisoning of others to be introduced in the trial. He also explained that a request for a second exhumation of the bodies was refused. Judge William B. Linn declared that this request should have been made by Little during the trial, and not after.

During September the Allas home was sold by the Sheriff to raise funds for carrying on the case.

Lady Greensleeves Hurt in Clash With Gail

(Republished from Cosmopolitan Magazine and soon to appear on the screen as a Cosmopolitan production made for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and starring Marion Davies.)

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

One of them lay quivering against the banisters, her disordered golden hair covering her bloody face. The other, stark-naked, made her way to the front door, shut and locked it, and groped about for her fallen knife.

But when she crept, panting, back to where Lady Greensleeves lay crumpled up against the banisters halfway downstairs, she could not arouse her.

Shuddering, grasping, almost faint[illegible], Operator 13 contrived to gather up the fragments of her hooded habit and wimple, and dress herself. She was aware, now, of a horrid screaming noise from somewhere, but whether it was the black maid in the coat closet or Mrs. Morris at a window she could not be sure.

She looked down at Lady Greensleeves, battered, bruised, befouled with blood, and still beautiful. Horror seized the girl, for that lovely neck seemed to have been broken. But as she bent low over the huddled woman the violet eyes opened. It was hopeless to attempt to carry her to the horses. There was nothing more to be done here, unless she meant to finish her. Besides, it was broad daylight outside.

Fragments of Lady Greensleeves nightgown lay on the stairs. With these torn into strips, the girl tied the lovely feet at the ankles, drew the resisting arms back and fastened the wrists.

Then Operator 13 picked up her girdle, sheathed her knife, buckled the belt under her habit, and holding to the stair rail, retreated slowly to the front door, opened it, locked it from the outside.

Rides Away

Nobody saw her. An early farmer, down the road, was driving a wagonload of apples toward Gettysburg. Nobody else was in the street.

When the mule-drawn wagon had disappeared the girl walked across the veranda and into the orchard, where Skylark and Lady Margrave were tearing at fruit branches with impatient teeth. Hooded, rumpled, still all aquiver, but nervously keyed up to what lay before her, the girl in her soiled nun's dress mounted Skylark, and, leading Lady Margrave, left the orchard, guiding her horses out across the grass.

The orchard was fenced with rails, but the bars were down. Through the gap she rode and out across Main street into the crooked, shady lane, skirting the horse trough, and continuing along it between orchards until the Frederick road cut her course.

Along this road were farmhouses with smoking chimneys and white men and black at work among apple trees. These turned to start at a nun astride a blooded horse and leading another, but no body moved to question or intercept her, and she urged Skylark into a gallop. Rural folk at breakfast or afield or milking at the open doors of barns were amazed to see a Sister of Sainte Chryseis go galloping through the ruddy sunrise.

It was still very early when she galloped into view of the mountains on her right and the little river at her left, where the Machanics turnpike passes near the westward bend of the Monocacy. And here she came suddenly upon a heartrending sight—a regiment of Federal cavalry, limping along on exhausted horses.

Exhausted Troops

Behind them labored a battery of horse artillery—or what remained of it—the animals scare able to drag gun and caisson. Even as she caught sight of them she saw horses stumble and fall and lie inert.

Some of the cavalrymen saw her coming, and an officer turned and came toward her at a stiff trot, halting her with uplifted arm. When he understood she was an agent of the United States Secret Service and had listened to her story and examined the two letters taken from the Emmitsburg postoffice, he looked at her hopelessly, then back at the wretched horsemen, then again gazed wearily at her.

"This is Pleasanton's command," he added. "We are dead in our saddles. Stuart is making for the fords; we are following. There is nobody to send back to Emmitsburg to arrest Lady Greensleeves; no man or horse yonder could last. You look sick and tired yourself, ma'am."

"Where are the Sixth Lancers?" she asked. "Can't they go?"

"I don't know where they are," said the officer, drearily. "If they're at Frederick they'll have to go to the mouth of the Monocacy. Your horses seem fresh. You'd better ride on ahead of us."

"Take me through, then," she said, desperately.

He gave her back her letters and attempted to keep up with her, but finally begged her to ride no faster than a trot. Even at that pace they soon overtook the cavalry and guns ahead. A pallid colonel listened to her and the captain who escorted her; waved her on; and she spurred forward on Skylark, Lady Margrave pounding along at lead.

A mile and a half outside Frederick she rode into the camp of the Sixth Lancers. Only a platoon or two remained on provost duty in town; there was not a trooper to be spared to ride back to Emmitsburg and arrest Lady Greensleeves. There was, however, a Federal detective named Wrigley at provost headquarters; and to him she confided her two horses. From him, also, she learned that Jeb Stuart, his cavalry and Pelham's guns, together with Union prisoners and 2,000 stolen Pennsylvania horses, had passed around Frederick through New Market, headed for White's Ferry.

A Choice to Make

"It's a terrible thing, ma'am, to leave that woman in Emmitsburg, but it would be far worse for us if the Rebel horsemen get back across the Potomac."

She showed him the two letters abstracted from the Morris box at Emmitsburg postoffice. He studied them, scowling.

"This grapevine telegram is correct," he said; "we did hang those two Rebel spies. I ought to know; I caught them myself. And I'd like to nab this Lady Greensleeves, too; but I've orders from Maj. Allen to watch the Rebel townspeople in Frederick and arrest anybody who tries to get to Jeb Stuart."

"Are there any Secret Service agents in the town?" she demanded.

"No, but there's a cipher man at Gen. Buford's headquarters. You'd better telegraph Maj. Allen for orders."

"Can I communicate with Knoxville?"

"Certainly. Come in with me, ma'am."

The provost guard was housed in an old flour mill near the railroad station, and here Operator 13 dismounted, observed with unfeigned astonishment and curiosity by sentry, military police and lounging loafers, black and white. A cavalry captain directed her into an adjoining shed, where a handsome young man sat before a telegraph instrument eating boiled rice and milk.

He had a lively eye and when Operator 13 threw back her cowl and was revealed to him, he laughed because the brown skin dye had worn off in patches and the pretty countenance of Gail Loveless, already cut and swollen by her battle with Lady Greensleeves, was now further adorned by alternate patches of Negro brown and Caucasian white.

Alert Young Man

However he was a shrewd young man and readily detected beauty in disguise; and, under its suspected spell, hastened to call up Secret Service in Knoxville. And in a few minutes Maj. Allen was on the other end of the wire.

"Operator 13, reporting from Frederick, Md." she said; and young Mr. Barry transmitted it with a lightning rattle of his instrument, and waited.

Back came Maj. Allen: "Where is Stuart?"

Then reply, question and reply sped back and forth over the telegraph:

"Stuart has ridden around through New Market, headed for White's Ford by way of Hyattstown. Pleasanton follows, but his horses can scarcely move."

"Is that the latest?"

Young Mr. Barry nodded to her and telegraphed back "Yes, sir."

"Attention, Operator 13," came

Gail Loveless, experienced actress at 20, was sent into the Confederate lines as a Union Spy. Disguised as a quadroon laundress, she deceived everybody, including Capt. Jack Gailliard, gallant spy in the Confederate service, who was ashamed to find himself deeply stirred by her saffron loveliness. Vespasian Chancellor, chief of Confederate spies, presently exposed her and she fled for her life. She stole the clothing of a farm boy to make herself appear to be a Negro stable boy.

Outwitting the pursuing Chancellor and Gailliard, she captured them, one at a time, and led them toward the Federal lines. On the way they stumbled upon the dreadful spectacle of a Union Army hanging a Confederate spy, and Operator 13, sickened, freed her prisoners. Before he rode away, Gailliard kissed her. Then she rode into Emmitsburg, Maryland, at dusk.

Exhausted, she met a young man who spoke the pass phrase of the Northern secret service and, at his advice, lay down under a tree to sleep. The man, a Southern spy, betrayed Operator 13 to the beautiful Lady Greensleeves, Confederate spy, who was living in Emmitsburg. Lady Greensleeves promised to "take care of the young Yankee actress" until the Confederate cavalry should arrive to hang her.

Operator 13 went to St. Joseph's School, stole the dress of a nun and, wearing it, returned and was admitted to her enemy's house. Lady Greensleeves, wakened from sleep, was told she was under arrest, but she knocked a knife out of Operator 13's hand and they fought savagely, with fists, clawing fingers and teeth, on a shadowy stair landing. Presently they fell, together, half-way down the stairs.

WATER SUPPLY BATTLE LOST BY MONESSEN

The City of Monessen lost its fight today to force the Tri-Cities Water Company of Pittsburgh to supply water to needy families having no money to pay for it and whose accounts neither property owners nor the City would guarantee payment.

The fight, carried into the State Supreme Court on an appeal by the City of Monessen from an injunction granted in Westmoreland County on petition of the water company, was lost when the Supreme Court handed down a decision affirming the lower court and imposing the costs upon the city.

The Monessen Board of Health maintained it was a menace to the city at large to deprive people of water. The appeal was filed last February after the water company had obtained the injunction.

A CROWD GATHERING IN FIFTH AVENUE, BETWEEN WOOD A ND SMITHFIELD, TO SEE RIPLEY'S ODDITIES ARRIVING TODAY

Ripley's Odditorium Arrives To Prove Daily Cartoon Facts

Opens Here Tonight; Cast to Appear Over WCAE

A gala program at 7 o'clock tonight formally introduces this "Believe It or Not" attraction to Pittsburgh. Public Safety Director Harmar D. Denny will represent Mayor John S. Herron in extending official welcome. Mayor Herron is absent from the city.

Practically the entire Ripley cast will appear in a special WCAE broadcast from 10:30 to 11 o'clock tonight.

The ODDITORIUM will be housed in the former Campbell department store at 333 Fifth avenue. The spacious storeroom, extending through to Oliver avenue, today was being put in readiness for the opening hour that will launch a week's engagement.

Here will be found positive proof that the "Believe It or Not" facts that Robert L. Ripley presents daily and Sunday in his Sun-Telegraph cartoon feature really do exist. No question of doubt will remain in the spectator's mind.

There will be some 25 human oddities. You'll not have to wonder about these men and women from a pen and ink illustration. They'll be right there in person, presented from 16 separate stages complete with curtains, light effects and scenery. Trained lecturers from the World's Fair will reveal the histories of these strange people.

There will be 300 inanimate curiosities. Arranged in specially constructed display cases, each object will be clearly proven to be hard-to-believe fact. Ripley has gathered them from all over the world. Not alone will this section of the ODDITORIUM surprise the spectator but will also be found as one of the most interesting educational features ever presented to adult or child.

And there are a few hours remaining in which to enter the Sun-Telegraph contest that will share 200 free tickets equally between adults and children. All entries must be received by midnight tonight. From all parts of the tri-state district, odd and curious facts have been submitted by the readers. Remaining contestants will have to hurry in their entries.

Christmas charity will receive the entire Sun-Telegraph share of receipts. The show will continue through Saturday. Daily performances beginning tomorrow will be continuous from 11:45 a. m. until midnight, except on Thanksgiving Day and Saturday when the doors will open at 10 a. m.

Adults will be admitted to the colossal collection of almost unbelievable facts for 40 cents. Children of 12 years and under will be admitted for 15 cents. But as a special feature to enable as many of these children to see the educational attraction, 10-cent matinees will be offered Thanksgiving and Saturday between 10 a. m. and noon.

RIPLEY CONTEST CLOSES TONIGHT

For the best "BELIEVE IT OR NOTS" submitted in the Sun-Telegraph contest, 200 FREE TICKETS will be awarded for Ripley's ODDITORIUM, opening at 7 o'clock tonight, and continuing through Saturday, at 333 Fifth avenue. All entries must be received by midnight tonight.

One hundred tickets will be mailed for the strangest facts submitted by adults. Another 100 will go to boys and girls.

Read Ripley cartoons in the Sun-Telegraph. Follow his ideas. Address your entry to the Ripley Contest, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

HAMMER FELLS MAN IN FIGHT

Alleged to have been hit on the head with a hammer near his shack at Shantytown last night, Mike Galisic, 63, was in a serious condition at West Penn Hospital today.

Homicide Detectives Frank Morgan and John Riley, called to investigate, said Galisic, pointed out Myles D. Sweeney, 39, of the Penn avenue colony, as one of the two men who had attacked him after a card game. Sweeney denied the accusation. Joseph Krowski, 47, who "bunks" with Galisic, also was arrested.

The attack was said to have occurred after Galisic had twice complained to Andrew Paulson, "Mayor" of Shandytown, that the two men had mistreated him and that he feared further harm.

Man in Hen Coop Resents Wife's Star Boarder

ELIZABETH, N. J.—William Gemmel didn't mind much when his wife ordered him out of the house. He found the chicken coop in the back yard comfortable enough.

He didn't even complain. William told Judge Henry S. Waldman, when his wife put up a wire fence to keep him from passing between the coop and the house.

But when she took in a lodger, a widower with four children, William became mildly resentful.

The judge told Mrs. Gemmel: "You'll have to get that lodger and his children out of the house within 24 hours, or I'll get a deputy sheriff to do it."

FLAMES SWEEP WAREHOUSE

A three-alarm fire raged through the warehouses of the Federated Metal Corporation, 615 Gross street, early yesterday, causing damage estimated by firemen at $8,000.

Fireman William Jenkins, of No. 14 Engine Company, suffered cuts on his hands while battling the flames, which were said to have started in wooden bins where metal is stored in the rear of the plant.

A portion of the roof caved in when the steel girders supporting it were twisted by the intense heat.

Voting Machines Purchase Upheld

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—The State Supreme Court today affirmed the Dauphin County Court which upheld the right of the Secretary of the Commonwealth to purchase voting machines for Philadelphia.

The decision involved the purchase of about 800 of the machines. The voters approved the use of the devices and the County Commissioners purchased sufficient to supply half the wards of the city. The failure to supply the entire city caused Richard J. Beamish, Secretary of the Commonwealth, to purchase the remained runder the law which requires him to make the purchase and send the bill to the county when the commissioners fail to carry out the will of the people.

102,000 SENT YULE SEALS

Twenty million 1933 Christmas seals, addressed to 102,000 homes in Pittsburgh and Allegheny County, were placed in the mails today, marking the beginning of the annual campaign of the Tuberculosis League of Pittsburgh against tuberculosis.

The alarming increase in the spread of the disease through Pittsburgh and Allegheny County, and present depression conditions of overcrowding and insufficient medical attention, which permit tuberculosis to find easy victims, were among the factors cited by John F. Casey, president of the Tuberculosis League of Pittsburgh and head of the Christmas seal campaign committee, in stressing the necessity for the success of this year's campaign.

Part of the Christmas Seal funds are also used to help maintain the Tuberculosis League's 150-bed hospital on Bedford avenue. Only 8 per cent of the hospital's expenses are paid by patients' fees, according to Mr. Casey, the remainder coming from private contributions and the annual seal campaign.

CHILDREN TOOLS OF AVARICE IN DOPE TRADE

By WINIFRED BLACK
Universal Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27.—How would you like to send your little 12-year-old daughter out peddling dope?

They caught a man doing this very thing down in New Orleans the other day.

Where do you suppose she went when her father gave the packages of deadly poison and sent her out to sell misery and shame and despair, at so much a grain?

Down to the levee where the giant black men buy cocaine to make them "step lively," when the mate calls orders from the deck of a lumber schooner.

Up dark, ill-smelling alleys where the human wreckage seems to gather by some weird and evil instinct.

Up to the famous hotel where the people go who have money to spend. The clerks may not know what the innocent looking little girl has to sell, but the woman who waits for her in one of the rooms upstairs knows, and she can hardly bear the strain until she hears the knock at the door, which tells her that her poison is there, waiting for her.

And they say the man who sent his daughter out day after day, winter and summer, in the rain and in the boiling sun, was once a man among men! Before he wrecked his life with dope.

We were all rather hopeful about the dope situation in the United States a few months ago, the new laws governing the manufacture of morphine, heroin, opium and cocaine limited the supply for the world's market.

But all at once the war has shifted to China and Japan.

Manchukuo, the new colony Japan has seized from China, is turning into a huge dope factory.

They are making there this year in that province alone 1,430 pounds of heroin, the most dangerous of all the habit-forming drugs, and there is NO LEGITIMATE USE FOR HEROIN EVEN IN THE PRACTICE OF HONEST MEDICINE ANYWHERE IN THE WORLD.

What does all this mean to America?

It means that we are going to be flooded with dope from one end of the country to the other: it means that the whole honest medical profession and the entire police force of this country are wondering what's going to happen if the budget directors do not give back to the narcotic bureau sufficient funds to enable the narcotic officers to make some sort of feeble attempt to keep down the tidal wave which is going to overflow into this country in the next few months.

What are we going to do about it, Mr. Douglas of the budget committee?

FINE WEAVINGS ON DISPLAY AT SCHOOL

Miss Winifred Mitchell, the founder of the Tenafly Weavers, is presenting her annual exhibition at the Winchester School on Fifth avenue. Certainly, there is no more appropriate exhibition for Thanksgiving than a collection of weaving, since this home-craft was the one decorative art of the pioneer woman.

Miss Redd

In this year's exhibition, Miss Mitchell has really a little international show of weaving. She has not only the work of her own Tenafly looms, but presents weaving as it differs in type, design, and color in Norway and Sweden where every community is a unit in itself. Unusual are her examples from Italy, South America, Macedonia, and England.

The Tenefly Weavers' work shows the flexibility of this decorative art in adapting itself to contemporary taste. The rugs, many of them from designs by the Frenchman, Silva Bruhns, in abstract patterns in muted grey, biege and brown, illustrate one of the most primitive arts in a completely contemporary idiom.

Linens to be used for the table are no longer conventional protection for wood, but are designed as part of a decorative ensemble. Beautifully proportioned are the chartreuse, rust, dark brown and others in values of grey and blue. This group is indicative of today's movement to domesticate art and use it freely and naturally as a part of every day living.

Plaids of all the Scotch clans are among other novelties in this delightful exhibition, which will be on view daily through December 4.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

Man Carries Stone in Mouth Many Years, Surprised by Revelation

MICHAEL J. JACKSON

Doctor Makes Find After Patient's Jaw Swells

Michael J. Jackson, of 606 Evergreen avenue, Millvale, for years carried a stone around in his mouth—unknowingly.

A short time ago Jackson said he went to a Millvale doctor with a swollen jaw that was annoying him considerably. The doctor sent him to a dentist to have an X-ray picture taken.

The X-ray revealed a dark object lying on the floor of his mouth in the gland below his tongue. So the doctor decided to operate.

When the operation was completed, Jackson learned that he had a stone in his mouth.

The stone was one and a quarter inches long and as thick as an ordinary lead pencil.

DEMOCRATS FIGHT COUNTY WORK LOAN

Proposals of the Allegheny County Commissioners to create a public works authority here with an immediate loan of $31,000,000 for improvements was branded as an attempt "to set up self-perpetuating super-government" at a Democratic legislative caucus here last night.

Steps were taken to oppose the legislation when it is introduced at Harrisburg by representatives of the County Commissioners.

It was asserted that the plan "would supersede in many instances the Councils and Public Works Department of the City of Pittsburgh and the various boroughs and townships of Allegheny County."

A spokesman said:

"There is no necessity for such legislation and the proposed program of public works can be gotten under way with greater speed if the Legislature, instead of giving to the proposed 'authority' the power to issue revenue bonds, would give the same powers direct to the county, city and other municipal divisions."

The Democratic county delegation will introduce a bill in the Legislature today authorizing the issuance of such bonds.

Under the plans of the Commissioners the Legislature would provide for the appointment of three men to form a private corporation. Money would be borrowed from the government by the corporation and the trio would direct the work, assume responsibility for the collection of tolls on the project and payment of the debt.

States Speed Federal Road Plan Contracts

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—A steady rise in the number of contracts awarded by the states for road work under their shares of the $400,000,000 Federal Highway Fund with a resultant rise in employment was reported last night to the Public Works Administration by the Bureau of Public Roads.

Secretary Ickes, Public Works Administrator, has been insistent that states lagging in spending their allocations rush the awarding of contracts to increase employment. Actual highway work financed from the fund was said to be under way now in every state.

The Public Works Administration estimated that 128,663 men were at work on the 3,245 road projects under construction.

Projects so far approved total $237,375,000 and it was estimated this amount would give direct employment to 281,640 men, public works officials said.

2,000 GET JOBS WITH CWA PAY

At least 2,000 unemployed men will be taken from county relief rolls this week and put to work on city and county improvement projects financed by Federal Civil Works funds, it was learned today at the county CWA headquarters.

Tentative approval has been given by State CWA Administrator Eric Biddle to the county's request for the grading of Pearce Mill road and Catfish Run road and to the city's proposals for sewer and playground improvements.

One thousand men will be employed on the city projects in addition to 900 now working on streets, who were transferred last week to the CWA payroll.

Final approval of the new work plans is expected within a day, according to James L. Stuart, county CWA head, who announced that the first CWA checks have been paid to 31 men who formerly received food orders for their work of distributing state-provided shoes to the needy.

Warrants will also be drawn within a day or so on the United States Treasury for the first week's pay of 928 workers, most of whom were taken over from the city, according to Stuart.

THE TOY MISSION WORKSHOP IN THE EHMANN HOME: FREE TOYS FOR 20,000 NEEDY

Santa's Helpers Work On Toys for Mission

6 Cellar 'Factories' Busy Repairing Yule Gifts

That no child may find an empty stocking Christmas morning, friends of the Pittsburgh Toy Mission are working overtime these days in their six cellar "toy factories," making and repairing thousands of toys. It's their hobby, their contribution to Christmas spirit, for they are donating their services.

The mission will observe its fortieth anniversary this Yuletide. When the headquarters opens at 100 Wood street, according to George L. Bond, head and founder of the charity, the huge job of collecting enough toys to fill the stockings of more than 20,000 poor children will begin in earnest.

But Santa's helpers, as the Toy Mission workers call themselves, work the year around. In their cellar workshops, they paint and repair toys, and make thousands of new ones, ready for Christmas eve. A little paint works wonders in making a doll house look bright and new again; a little welding or a new bolt here or there will make most mechanical toys work with all their original charm. Dolls get clean new dresses and new complexions.

The mission is appealing to the public to donate toys. In many homes where children have grown up, their toys, many broken, are gathering dust. Bond appeals to their owners to bring them in, so they may be used to make other children happy this Christmas.

As usual, schools, churches, the Boy Scouts and other organizations will assist the mission in collecting toys this season.

Workshops are maintained by R. L. Ehman, 2966 Espy avenue, Dormont, and Frank L. Miller, R. A. Stoner, G. D. Piper, Clyde Phillips and Mrs. C. O. Sargent, all of Pittsburgh.

All hope that the toy mission idea will spread throughout the country.

CENTER AVE. 'Y' 10 YEARS OLD

The Center Avenue Branch of the Pittsburgh Y. M. C. A. will celebrate the tenth anniversary of its new building with a mass meeting next Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, it was announced today.

The building, located at Center avenue and Francis street, was built in 1923 at a cost of $275,000.

Having a membership enrollment of 2,045 Negroes, the Center Avenue Branch led all others in the recent membership drive.

Dr. Charles Harris Wesley, head of the history department at Howard University, Washington, will be the guest speaker at the anniversary meeting.

Children Miss School, Parents Pay Fines

Sx parents of the "Polish Hill" section of Mifflin Township were assessed small fines for alleged failure to send their children to school at hearings before Justice of the Peace John Engle, of Mifflin Township, Saturday night, police reported.

YOUTH KNIFED, MAN SHOT

A Creighton youth was stabbed, perhaps fatally, and a Glassmere man shot down by a man said by police to have run amuck with a pistol and knife in Normantown Hollow, East Deer Township, early yesterday.

Stabbed in the arm and back, George Blasco, 22, of Creighton, was removed to the Allegheny Valley Hospital at Tarentum, where he was reported to be in a critical condition with several fractured ribs and a punctured lung.

John Mraz, 45, of Glassmere, was struck in the leg by a stray bullet, police said.

Constable Irvey Asay, of East Deer Township, said that the shooting occurred when Michael Graybar, 33, of Glassmere, who was later arrested at his home on a charge of felonious shooting, became involved in an argument with Walter Kissell, 21, of Normantown, in front of the Slovak American Club.

During the argument, Graybar is alleged to have drawn a revolver and fired at Kissell, the bullet striking Mraz, according to Asay.

Patrolman Held For Brandishing Gun

George Butler, 45, Negro, a special patrolman, was held for court at a hearing before Magistrate Thomas Jones after two patrolmen testified he threatened them with a revolver in a drug store at 1 Smithfield street.

Two clerks in the store also said Butler threatened them with a gun when he followed his wife, with whom he was quarreling, into the store. His wife, Mrs. Nellie Butler, was also held.

Hilarious Cruise In Taxi Lands Man in Jail

Joseph Kennedy, 33, of Springdale, was sentenced to 10 days in the workhouse today for letting his exuberance run away with his business judgment.

According to Patrolman Jay McCormick, Kennedy, in a high state of hilarity, hired a taxicab last night and cruised about the city $18.50 worth. Then he went to sleep and the driver couldn't budge him.

Kennedy told Magistrate Rothenberg he didn't remember any of it. He couldn't pay a $5 fine.

STATE OPENS PRISON PROBE

International News Service.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27.—Pennsylvania's penal system may be reorganized as a result of the investigation which began today into the recent riots at the Eastern State Penitentiary here.

Dr. Louis N. Robinson, a penologist recently appointed to the board of trustees of the prison by Gov. Gifford Pinchot and who is conducting the investigation at the Governor's direction with H. Henry Walnut, an attorney, and Maj. Lynn G. Adams, superintendent of the state police, said:

"Out of this inquiry may come a movement for a complete reorganization of the whole antiquated penal system of the state."

Convicts were promised immunity by the probers as they were called to tell why they risked their lives and long stretches in solitary confinement to rebel against the rule of Warden Herbert J. Smith.

FIRE DESTROYS 3 POLK HOMES

FRANKLIN, Pa., Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Three houses, less than a quarter mile from the Polk State School for the Feeble Minded, were destroyed by fire during a furious snowstorm at Polk, near here.

Starting last night in the home of Frank Marshall, the flames spread quickly to the dwellings of Mrs. Maude Marshall and James Bell.

Fire companies from Oil City, Franklin, Sandy Lake, Grove City and the Polk School helped battle the fire.

SPORT COMMENT

PITT BID WOULD MAKE OLD MATES RIVALS

Though the Panthers themselves were idle Saturday, while Duquesne was crushing Geneva and Carnegie Tech was suffering an unexpected defeat at the hands of New York U., the Pitt system as established by Pop Warner was not out of the picture. It was kept very much in the public eye by the 7-to-3 victory of Tiny Thornhill's Stanford team over California. The triumph carried Stanford right into the Rose Bowl, winning for the Cardinals the invitation to represent the Coast in the New Year's Day classic against an Eastern opponent yet to be selected.

Tiny Thornhill

As Thornhill is a local product, and learned his football in a Panther uniform, Pittsburgh joins in Stanford's jubilation over the achievement of the all-time Blue and Gold tackle in leading his team to the Rose Bowl heights in his first year as head coach. Even if a Pittsburgh team is not to figure in the big event this time, the city and the district and the Oakland university may feel justly proud of the fact that a man who got his gridiron development here has made the grade on the West Coast. And will be one of the chief figures in the feature battle of January 2.

Too bad that Minnesota defeat will keep the Panthers from getting the Eastern bid to Pasadena if they defeat Carnegie Tech on Thursday. If Pitt were to play Stanford, the Rose Bowl game would present the novelty of former teammates meeting as opposing coaches. For three years, Thornhill and Jock Sutherland played together in the Panther line under Coaches Joe Duff and Pop Warner. Thornhill was a tackle in 1913-14-15-16, and Sutherland was a guard in 1914-15-16-17. Both hold places on Pitt's all-time team.

PYRAMID PLAY MAY PROMPT NEW RULE

Some of the football thinkers predict a new rule will come out of the Oregon State stunt so widely discussed during the last few weeks, in which a tall center, towering 6 feet 6 inches, stands on the hands of two teammates to block goal kicks attempted by opponents. As has been ruled, the trick is now legal, but the code-makers may be asked to bar it.

Eastern critics recall that a few years ago Tuss McLaughry gave the Brown team a play in which a tall end named Babcock ran five yards down the field, and, springing from the locked hands of a teammate, caught an over-the-line pass thrown by a halfback. The pass was a lob, tossed high in the air, and the defense had no chance of stopping it. The gain after Babcock caught the ball was naturally limited, however, because the end was thrown before he could get away. The play never was risked in a game, but was used frequently in practice.

PLUNGER AND PASSER BEST COMBINATION

One of football's old-timers, protesting against too much fancy stuff, holds that a team can remember just so many signals and execute satisfactorily only a limited number of plays. He says that when a coach overburdens a team with plays, and consequently requires the memorizing of too many signals, the offense is bound to be handicapped.

s held that a team with a good line plunger and a forward passer has the most valuable combination to be found in gridiron attack. The line plunger brings up the secondary, setting the stage for the passer. The latter, in turn, can drive back the secondary and set the stage for the plunger.

BUCKNAM AND NICKSICK ONCE TEAMMATES

Through the football season, some of the players on the local college teams, while fighting hard for the success of their own elevens, have been pulling earnestly for fellow townsmen wearing the colors of schools in other parts of the country. One of the closest friendships of prep schools days is that existing between Ralph Bucknam, regular center for Army, and Mike Nicksick, Pitt halfback. Bucknam resides in Langeloth, near Burgettstown, and graduated from Burgettstown High School. He and Nicksick played on the same team during their high school days.

Leo Malarkey

Another product of this region who has made a big name for himself in football, and who has townsmen on Pittsburgh teams, is Dougal Russell, of Kansas State. His home is in McDonald, the same town that sent Hub Randou and Leo Malarkey to Pitt, Anthon Baron to Duquesne, and Capt. Whitey Randour to Villanova. Russell has starred to the extent of winning mention as a candidate for all-America backfield honors. Last year Kansas State, of which Bo McMillin is coach, made 13 points against Purdue, more than were scored by any other opponent of the Boilermakers, and one of the touchdowns was due to a great run by Russell, who sprinted 62 yards to score on a pass from Emmett Breen. This season, Kansas State has lost only to Nebraska, and Nebraska players pronounced the McDonald lad the best running back they had encountered.

HARVARD FINDS ARMY DESIRABLE FOE

Squawks about the three-year eligibility rule notwithstanding, Army can remain on Harvard's schedule just as long as it wants, and one of the reasons is explained in the following editorial in the Harvard A. A. News:

"Some 45,000 persons, sitting in the Harvard Stadium as the Army game ended, waited to see the reaction of the Cadet Corps to [illegible] victory. The Army cheer leaders ran to the Cadet section, called for a cheer for Harvard and a cheer for the Army team. The Cadets gave them, and then slowly walked out of the Stadium for an evening's leave in Boston. There was no rush for the goal posts. There was no disorder. It was a dignified ending to a fine game, and tribute to the way in which the Cadets take their football victories."

FUTURE OF BABE HERMAN UNCERTAIN

Baseball fans continue to wonder what is to become of Babe Herman, now that the Cubs have obtained Chuck Klein? That Herman didn't go to the Phils in the Klein deal was due possibly to a desire on the part of the Quaker owners to get more money on the side by accepting a player of lower value than Babe in the trade camouflage. But it doesn't mean that Herman will remain with the Cubs. Both Babe and Klein are right fielders and left-hand hitters, and the two would not fit into the Bruin picture.

Babe Herman

Though Cincinnati had one experience with Herman, the Cub management still may have hopes of putting through the deal, once called off, in which Herman, Pat Malone, Jim Mosolf and a fat check were offered for Chick Hafey. If that fails again, there won't be many ports open to the Babe. Unless the Giants would be interested, with a view to moving Mel Ott to center, the Braves might be the

TECH'S PASSING AND BLOCKING BELOW PAR

By Howard Harpster

Carnegie Tech Football Coach; All-America Quarterback, 1928.

On Mondays, the writer is supposed to review the game in which his team played the Saturday before and explain technically the reasons which caused the game to end as it did. When Tech has won, the job is easy, and even after the Purdue defeat it wasn't extra difficult, for we lost to a great undefeated team. But today the task is most difficult, for we lost to our old rival, New York University, last Saturday, by a 7-0 score, and the Violets this year have been defeated on five occasions.

Howard Harpster

Although the Tech team made more first downs and gained much more ground from scrimmage, the New York team clearly deserved its victory. The Violet players didn't appear to be the least bit discouraged or downhearted over their poor season and put up a great exhibition. The 12 men who played throughout the game gave us one of our cleanest and hardest-fought engagements of the season.

The New Yorkers cashed in on their only scoring chance early in the second quarter, on a long forward pass, and from then on played a safe, conservative game, protecting their seven-point advantage.

BLOCKING IS POOR

Although Carnegie never got within New York's 15-yard line, it appeared time after time as if the boys were on their way to a score. More often it was a couple of hard-fighting New York tacklers who came up fast to stop a march, but on seven occasions it was poor ball handling by the Tech backs that frustrated them. Of the seven fumbles committed by our team, four were recovered by New York.

Besides the loose ball handling, the most glaring weaknesses in the Tartan attack were the blocking and forward passing. Time after time our ball carriers were around the New York ends with several teammates leading the interference only to have one or two Violet backs stop the play because the interferers failed to interfere. Our team's blocking was poorer than it has been for a long time.

The forward-passing game, which has been our strongest offensive weapon all season, took a nose dive and was very ineffective. The New York team covered the receivers very well and our passes were poorly timed. Instead of the streamline type of pass, most of our throws were high looping ones which enabled the defensive backs to cover them. Several times when the passes were timed and thrown correctly the receivers dropped the ball, so, as a whole, our passing game was very poor.

STEVE TEREBUS STARS

One player who really stood out for our team and who played one of his finest games was little Steve Terebus. He carried the ball splendidly, fought and twisted for extra yardage and all but broke away on several occasions.

The game marked the fourth straight licking Lovewell and I have received from New York University, three of them as players. It is our earnest hope that the tide will turn next year.

TOMMY IN DRAW

Chillysauce

By Chilly Doyle

The close approach of Turkey Day means that the boys with the headgears will soon bow out and for the remainder of the cold months the outdoor sports field will be turned over, without a struggle, to the lads of the bare legs who would run off their soccer games if they had to stage them on the ice packs of the Arctic Circle.

Lloyd Waner is beginning to weaken. Lloyd admitted today he had gained about five pounds while tramping the woods and playing golf since the baseball season ended, but he intimated he will talk Socko McCarey into an auto trip to Sunny Florida where the outfielder expects to join Brother Paul and others in a fishing expedition.

Lloyd yesterday morning made a golf date for today with several friends for a round on the links of Stanton Heights, but when they got him out of bed at midnight last night to remind him of his seven o'clock engagement, the little ball hawk used language that can scarcely be printed. The snowstorm changed everything.

Brother Lloyd thinks he is in for a banner season next year and his condition bolsters his statements. He makes no secret of the fact that he is fed up on playing leftfield. Like the good little soldier he is, Lloyd will take any order, but he loves to play center.

Said Sprout:

"Gosh dingit—I wish Gibby would put me back in center where I like to play, but I don't want to ask him to do it. Freddy is O. K. over there, but I reckon he would just as leave be in leftfield."

Bill McKechnie, accompanied by 8-year-old Jimmy, attended the Dukes-Geneva game Saturday at Forbes Field. Skipper Bill is sold on the Dukes and he is in love with Elmer Layden's personality and coaching skill, but Little Jimmy has a better knowledge of what is going on in the football world than his dad. Jimmy knows all about the unbeaten teams, who is likely to go to the Rose Bowl and all that sort of stuff.

As sooon as Outfielder Walter Berger was operated on for appendicitis, President Emil Fuchs, of the Braves, called up his manager to apprise him of the fact. Berger came through the ordeal in a satisfactory manner and is well on the road to recovery.

McKechnie informed Bill Benswanger, of the Pirates, that in his opinion Pitcher Red Lucas would help the Buccos next year. Bill is among those who prefers Lucas to Silas Johnson, the speedball righthander whom the Pirates tried to annex as they first negotiated with the Reds with the idea of making a trade. Bill admits that Johnson has better stuff than the sorrel-top, but he avers that the redhead has much more stuff right beneath the old baseball cap.

POST-SEASON SCHOOL TITLE FRAY LOOMS

By JULIUS LEVIN

Whether or not post-season games will be ordered to determine the class AA and class B championships of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League will be decided tonight when the football committee, headed by Elmer Carroll, coach at Wilkinsburg High School, convenes in the Fort Pitt Hotel.

The W. P. I. A. L. football committee will have no difficulty awarding the class A championship inasmuch as Scott High School, of North Braddock, coached by Johnny Reed, rules supreme in this division. Scott was the only class A school to go through the season undefeated and untied.

Three teams, New Castle, Jeannette and Greensburg will present claims for title recognition in the class AA division. Two of them, New Castle and Jeannette, were co-champions along with McKeesport last season.

STARS TO CLASH

However, the situation in this group will be cleared up considerably Thursday afternoon when Jeannette and Greensburg tangle in their annual Thanksgiving Day fray. The winner likely will be asked to play a post-season game with New Castle, which has completed its class AA race. Jeannette is willing to meet the Lawrence Countians, but, according to Winners in tonight's bouts at the Moose Temple, downtown, will be rewarded with battles on future cards in the same arena.

Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, meets Joey Speigal, Uniontown southpaw welterweight, in the 10-round main bout, and Joey Bazzone, of McKeesport, who recently won by a technical knockout over Belmont when the latter received an eye injury, opposes Jackie Holt, Akron Negro, brother of Billy Holt, local middleweight, in another 10-rounder, with the two winners to oppose each other next week in a companion piece to a return bout between Anson Green, of Homestead, and Billy Holt, who last Monday night put on a thriller at the Moose.

The winner of the Elmer Wilson-Dominic Mancini second preliminary of six rounds will box Marty Gornick at a later date. Tony DiPiero and Mike Bazzone, district light-heavies, are in the opener, set for 8:30.

Considerable interest is evident in the first appearance of Joe Savoldi, former Notre Dame football star, as a wrestler at the Arena, on the North Side, Friday night. He will meet Jim Clinstock in the main event of a five-bout show.

The next wrestling show at Motor Square Garden will be staged Wednesday night of next week.

It seems there were two Irishmen . . . well, 11 of 'em . . . representing St. Vincent and they provided the major college football upset of the week-end . . . and one of the major upsets of the entire season, as they slowed down the Scarlet Hurricane of Davis-Elkins to a mere zephyr and put the kibosh on the high-scoring, unbeaten Senators' career in a most devastating manner.

Aside from that game, played before a crowd about one twentieth the size the contest deserved, the results of last Saturday's battles were as to be expected, with the single exception of Carnegie's loss to New York University.

TIGERS VICTORS

Princeton ran true to form in beating Rutgers; the Army had its expected hard fight against Navy, Columbia completed the most successful season in years by knocking down Syracuse; Southern California came through (as has everybody else this fall save Northwestern) and trimmed Notre Dame; Tiny Thornhill's Stanford Indians won the Pacific Coast title by beating California; Grove City and West Virginia Wesleyan won their games, at the respective expenses of Thiel and Glenville, and the good old Dukes wound up their regular season with an impressive and satisfactory triumph over Geneva.

Oh yes, there's little joy in New Haven today, for Harvard's hit-or-miss varsity clicked ably and trimmed the sons of Eli with great gusto. Maybe that decisive Crimson triumph might be chalked up as an upset at that.

It wasn't so much the defeat of the Davis-Elkin eleven that shocked as it was the manner with which it was accomplished. My, but those Bearcats must have been hitting. Their aerial game proved to be entirely too potent for the Hurricane to cope with; in fact, it was through the air that the 'Cats got the jump, and they continued to stay out in front all the way. It was one of those things, that ball game, with the Hurricane getting all the first downs and the Bearcats the touchdowns.

And, after all, they still pay off on the touchdowns.

TARTANS DEFEATED

The Carnegie-N. Y. U. game was just another ball game. Aside from the touchdown play, whereby Eddie Smith hurled a fine pass to Quarterback Charley Seigal, there wasn't a thrilling play in the contest. Seigal made one of those hair-raising catches, juggling the ball as he took it over his right shoulder and causing the hearts of the Violet supporters and coaches to bob about where their Adam's apples should have been, but he held on and went on to score.

Capt. Red Stewart, of the Plaid, played himself a ball game Saturday and deserves to be rated with the best terminals in the East. He was down the field under kicks, into the New York backfield regularly, into his own team's interference and generally conducted himself as a great end should.

The work of New York's big tackle, Abe Scheurer, however, was the most outstanding bit of individualism of the game. Scheurer had one of those days that a tackle now and then will have. He was prominent in at least 20 plays and was particularly on the job when ever there was a fumble to be recovered (or caused) or a man to be stopped just as he appeared set for a touchdown run.

The defeat was particularly disappointing to Coach Harpster,

Detroit team which won the first seven-day ice-skating marathon, in Duquesne Garden, enjoys a moment of relaxation immediately after the grueling grind. PITTSBURGH GETS PUBLIC LINKS TOURNEY

NATIONAL TEST CARDED HERE NEXT YEAR

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Ganson Depew, chairman of the public links section committee of the United States Golf Association, today announced that the 1934 public links golf championship had been awarded to Pittsburgh and would be held July 30-August 4.

REPRESENTATIVE HERE

A member of the United States Golf Association Public Links Section was in Pittsburgh today to complete arrangements with local golf men for the staging of the national public links tournament on the South Park county course next summer.

Pittsburgh's bid was made by the County Commissioners, the Chamber of Commerce and other civic groups.

GRID SEASON ON LAST LAP

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Football virtually winds up its 1933 season this week with perhaps the biggest double-barrelled finish in its history.

A program of more than 30 big-time duels, split between Thangsgiving Day and Saturday, will polish off a spectacular campaign in fitting style. A few major outfits will carry their seasons farther into December, but it will be "taps" for most after this week.

Developments of the week will definitely settle two of the four sectional championships still undecided and will throw more light on the national championship aspirations of Army, Princeton and Duke, the only remaining major undefeated and untied elevens.

FIVE CHAMPS SET

So far five Conference races have been decided with Michigan repeating in the Big Ten, Nebroska in the Big Six and Oklahoma A. and M. in the Missouri Valley. Stanford, the Rose Bowl nominee, and Oregon finished in a tie for the Pacific Coast title, while Duke and South Carolina have completed their Southern Conference seasons without defeat or tie, Duke having won one more game than the Gamecocks.

The situation in the other four groups lines up as follows:

East—Army and Princeton the only unbeaten, united leaders.

Rocky Mountain—Denver and Colorado Aggies survive.

Southwest-Arkansas has clinched the crown, but may lose out through the playing of an ineligible player. In that case, Baylor, Texas Christian and Texas A. and M. still would have a chance at the title.

Outstanding features of this week's program:

East—Brown and Colgate, Penn and Cornell, Pitt and Carnegie Tech, West Virginia and Washington & Jefferson are the principal Thanksgiving Day parings, but most of the excitement will be reserved for Saturday when Army plays Notre Dame and Princeton clashes with Yale.

ALABAMA FACES TEST

South—Alabama, playing Vanderbilt on Thursday, will have a chance to clinch at least a share in the Southeastern title while Louisiana State, the only other contender, must whip Tulane Saturday and Tennessee December 9 to gain rating with the Crimson Tide assuming an Alabama victory over Vanderbilt.

Far West—Southern California's sectional tussle with Georgia Saturday tops the program with St. Mary's playing Oregon and Washington State meeting U. C. L. A. Thursday.

Grove City Cards Seven Grid Frays

GROVE CITY, Pa., Nov. 27.—A seven-game football schedule for the Grove City College of the 1934 season has been arranged by Athletic Director Thorn. The schedule follows:

October 6—Holbrook College, Grove City.
October 13—Slippery Rock Teachers, Slippery Rock.
October 20—Bethany College, Grove City.
October 27—Allegheny College, Meadville.
November 3—Westminster College, Grove City.

Names in News

The injury jinx which has followed Geneva College all season made its presence felt in the battle with Duquesne when ART GRAHAME emerged with a broken collar bone. On October 28, CLIFF AULTMAN suffered a broken leg against St. Vincent.

KAREL KOZELUH, of Czechoslovakia, yesterday was crowned professional tennis champion of South America in the tournament staged in Buenos Aires.

TEX WILLIAMS joined the list of local bowlers who have rolled 300 when he turned the trick on the Roxian alleys in McKees Rocks late Saturday night.

TAYLOR COTTER, of Sewickley, is one of the stars of the Moses Brown School soccer team, of Providence, R. I.

GEORGE LOTT today denied a report by WILLIAM O'BRIEN, manager of BILL TILDEN, that LOTT, CLIFFORD SUTTER, LESTER STOEFEN and KEITH GLEDHILL had expressed a desire to become tennis professionals.

COONEY WEILAND, center of the Ottawa team of the National Hockey League, has been traded to Detroit for CARL VOSS and an unstated amount of cash.

BERNIE BIERMAN, football coach at Minnesota, today said he would be with the Gophers again next year, and that the season just ended was "better than expected."

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF LAST SATURDAY: THE TREE OF JUSTICE—In the early days of Pueblo, Col., 14 offenders against the primitive laws of the frontier were hanged upon the sturdy old cottonwood tree, standing in the center of what now is South Union avenue, Pueblo. At the time, that part of the town was in Mexico, while the territory north of the river was No Man's Land. Judge Lynch was the presiding jurist under the cottonwood tree, and his court, which boasted neither clerks nor reporters, had the reputation of being the most relentless tribunal of the frontier. One of the victims of the tree was convicted by the process of drawing lots. Among the victims were three horse thieves of the vicinity of the St. Charles mesa. THE BLIND CHECKER WIZARD—Augustine Massa, blind from boyhood, defeated 27 opponents simultaneously in January, 1922. This astonishing feat means that he had to memorize the position of 648 checkers constantly at the same time. Previously he defeated 10 and 20 simultaneous opponents. Massa, who is a practicing attorney in New York, won the heavyweight wrestling championship of Columbia University in 1921 and proves to what high degree man can master his fate in overcoming handicaps.

BLOCKING BEAT IRISH--HUNK

By HEARTLEY (HUNK) ANDERSON
Notre Dame Coach

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 27.—Football still is played up in the line, and it was the superior blocking of Southern California that beat Notre Dame Saturday, 19-0. The Trojans' backfield blocking also was excellent and after the first quarter they had the edge on us in this department.

So far as Notre Dame was concerned, the turning point came when Don Elser was injured. He will not be able to play against Army next Saturday.

The scoring break came when Cotton Warburton pulled his first long run, which placed him in a scoring position. He is as good a back as I have seen all year.

WARBURTON HERO

The story of the game is largely a story of Warburton. Homer Griffith, who started at quarterback, played a splendid game, especially in the third quarter, but, when Warburton was in there, the attack seemed to get new life. He is not only a fine spark-plug, but he is a better open field runner and he picks his holes a little better than Griffith.

Andy Pilney was taken out of the play on which Warburton made his first long run. Mazziotti came across from the other side of the field to make the tackle.

Capt. Ray Brancheau was the man assigned to cover Griffith on the pass to the flat zone at the left when the latter scored; but Brancheau had been slowed down by a leg injury and is not to be blamed for letting Griffith get away.

ROSENBERG STANDS OUT

Brancheau, Wunsch and Roach were outstanding on defense for Notre Dame. Leonard and Wunsch blocked very well on offense.

Rosenberg, who played right end and tackle on defense and guard on offense, played a fine game all the way through. Palmer, right end on offense, dropped back into the secondary on defense. He was great today on both defense and on offense, where his blocking was outstanding.

The Southern California tackles were just fair on defense, but the secondary and men playing the end positions more than made up for any deficiency in this section of the line.

SPORT VIGNETTES

St. Vincent College has renamed Davis & Elkins' Scarlet Hurricane the Little Red Zephyr . . . After that 7-0 defeat by N. Y. U., Carnegie Tech's slogan will be "They Shall Not Pass." . . . Stanford an Princeton ought to be quite an attraction for the Rose Bowl game, with Tiny Thornhill's Cardinals having upset both Southern California and California and Princeton having been scored upon only once in going into its final game with Yale next Saturday undefeated.

Somebody missed when that Sunday sports bill was made up in Harrisburg. . . . It provides for only baseball and football. . . . Soccer comes under the head of football and thus is included. . . . But how about basketball, lacrosse and other indoor sports? . . . Attempts to get permission to play basketball and lacrosse in Motor Square Garden have been met with the reply that they are not provided for by the law.

Dave Thompson, Pittsburgh's new wrestling promoter, is a "ringer" for Tommy Grant, veteran timekeeper at boxing and wrestling shows and former manager of boxers and promoter . . . They thought they were looking into a mirror as they met the other night . . . Louie Amen, local trick pianist, went in heavily for George Gershwin's concert, even if George can't play a piano with his toes, as Louie can.

A wrestling bout in Chicago drew more than $20,000 the other night while Tommy Loughran and Ray Impellittiere were fighting before only $7,400 in a widely-ballyhooed heavyweight bout in New York . . . Indicating what? . . . From the House of David in Benton Harbor, Mich., comes word requesting that basketball fans be warned against pseudo House of David teams this season . . . The House of David will not be represented by a team and will not authorize one.—HARRY KECK.

Oil City Sports Sage Is Killed

OIL CITY, Pa., Nov. 27.—(AP.)—James E. Farrell, popular figure among Oil City sports lovers for his amazing ability at "picking the winner," was struck and killed by a car last night. He was 38.

E. M. Yeager, of Franklin, driver of the machine, was absolved of blame by Coroner L. D. Steffee.

Farrell, a former employe of the Oil City Derrick, was known as "the sports sage." He was credited with correctly predicting the victor in sports events ranging from football to horse racing, nine times out of 10.

Kiki Cuyler Signs For 1934 Campaign

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—(Universal.)—Hazen (Kiki) Cuyler, Chicago Cubs outfielder, has signed his contract for 1934.

Cuyler, whose work in the last two years with the Cubs has been hampered by a series of injuries, announced he was in excellent condition.

MORGAN HOLDS HEIDELBERG TO DEADLOCK

By TOM BIRKS

Playing on a heavy, sodden field, and in a minature snow storm, the Morgan and Heidelberg teams battled through 100 minutes of hard soccer to a scoreless deadlock in a national challenge cup contest.

After the regular 90 minutes of play, Referee George Branngan ordered an extra 10 minutes of action, but after eight minutes had elapsed, decided to call off hostilities for the day. The weather and field conditions were very bad and the official fully was justified in halting the game when he did.

The fans saws a brilliant game, despite the weather. The Green and Gold of Heidelberg held the slight edge. Stanley Kuten led the raiding front line with plenty of dash, but this was met by a stalwart Morgan defense. Dante Villani and Dave Matthews played great defensive ball, and for that matter, so did Kuten and Bobish for Heidelberg.

Whether the Glendale team has withdrawn from the Keystone League or not since that mess at Glendale a week ago will be known this week.

Yesterday, Glendale did not appear at Cecil for a scheduled league game, and now it seems certain that Glendale is through. Officials of the club told Referee McArdle the team was through following the Shannon game. The league officials should have investigated and saved Cecil its disappointment yesterday.

MOUNTS ANNEX GRID TITLE

The Broadway Mounts today are proud possessors of the South Hills district independent football championship. They won the title yesterday by turning back the Brookline Merchants, 12 to 0, in a hard-fought battle.

The Mounts tallied in the second and third periods. Meals, star halfback going over for both tallies.

The Williams A. C. had a tough time getting past the Snee eleven yesterday, winning 2 to 0 after a hard ball game. Williams showed a marked offensive superiority, but when in striking distance of the goal line, found the Snee defense too tough. A blocked punt in the third quarter provided a safety and the margin of victory.

In other games yesterday, the Aliquippa Indians downed the Freedom Firemen, 25 to 0; Clairton Eagles won over McChesneytown, 27 to 0; the McBrides walloped Christy Park, 18-0; Rooney Reds nosed out the Lewis Club, 6-0; J. B. Reeds and the Twenty-third Ward Traders tied, 0-0; McKeesport Crimsons bowed to the Union eleven, 13-0; McKeesport Olympics took the Creighton Tigers, 12-0, and the Irwin Merchants beat the Doyles, 6-0.

The Shady Side Locklins won the Division B championship in Section II when they defeated the Pastime Club, 6 to 0. Rustry scoring the only touchdown in the first quarter.

Brovelli Leaves For Coast Home

Angel Brovelli, former St. Mary's College all-America halfback star, who has been playing with the Pittsburgh Pirates of the National Professional Football League this fall, has departed for his home in California.

Brovelli suffered an injury to his hand in the game with the Philadelphia Eagles last week and is through for the season.

The Pirates today announced that Ray Kemp, former Duquesne University star, who was with the team early in the season, had been signed again and that Whitey Engebretson had been released.

STANFORD SET TO PICK ROSE BOWL FOE

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Named to uphold the best traditions of Far Western football, Stanford's Cardinals scanned the nation's gridirons today in the search that will produce a worthy opponent from the sunrise side of the Rockies as a contender for Rose Bowl laurels New Year's Day in Pasadena.

While no official move will be made until late today and Graduate Manager All Masters, of Stanford, says one guess is as good as another, either Princeton or Army, unbeaten and untied among the major elevens, is expected to get the call.

Duke University has a similar record and Michigan, leader of the Big Ten Conference, has one tie against it and each will be considered for the assignment, but from sources close to headquarters it was learned these teams are rated secondary choices.

As the team to represent the West, Stanford has the privilege of inviting the eleven it considers the best of the rest of the country to be its opponent.

Claude E. (Tiny) Thornhill, who led Stanford out of the wilderness of defeat and disappointment in his first season as head coach, will sit with Masters and other members of the board of athletic control when Rose Bowl prospects will be gone over.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—The Notre Dame system of football is working very little better for the Green Bay Packers, for years its leading exponent in the professional branch of the game, than it is for the Irish themselves this year.

The Packers, formerly just as tough to conquer as Notre Dame, and frequent winners of the pro title, have won only four games out of 11 this season. Yesterday they took a 17-to-6 beating from the New York Giants, leader of the Eastern division of the league. An 85-yard run by Dale Burnett, who intercepted a Packer pass, gave the Giants a touchdown and a pass from Harry Newman to Morris Badgro accounted for another. Ken Strong broke into the scoring by making good on a 30-yard free kick, following a fair catch.

Chicago's Bears turned back Portsmouth's bid for the Western Division lead by defeating the Spartans, 17 to 1.

reports. Greensburg will decline the game if it succeeds in defeating Jeannette.

The field of contenders in class B was reduced to two teams Saturday when Mt. Pleasant High School swept aside East Huntingdon, leaving Ned Culler's eleven and East Pittsburgh High, coached by Johnny Coleman, the sole survivors. Both teams have completed their schedules and may meet Saturday, probably at Greensburg, to determine the championship.

Out at Glassport High School this evening the officials of the Junior Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League celebrates the close of a successful season with a business meeting and banquet. Andy Gustafson, assistant football coach at Pitt, will be the principal speaker. Edmind Wicht, of Harrisburg, P. I. A. A. official, also will be a guest. R. E. Beaton, of Wilkinsburg Junior High School, will be in charge.

Fathers and sons will gather around the festive board at Shady Side Academy tonight to mark the close of the football and soccer seasons. The banquet will be held in the school dining room.

Young Maintains College Grid Scoring Lead

Although both were idle last week, Pete Young, of Bluefield College and Cecil Kent, of the Murray Teachers held their places at the top of the national football scoring lists.

Young tops the country in scoring with 108 points in eight games, while Kent has counted 84 in the same number of games. Beattie Feathers, Tennessee flash, with 72 points is third.

of the Plaid, who believed his team had the stuff to beat the Violets and wanted to add the New York U. scalp to his list for the year. But the Violets, who had won only one other major game, that with Lafayette, was set too well. The defense was fine and explained easily why the Violets were able to give Fordham such an argument, though they did eventually lose out.

Now the Tartans must go right back to work, to prepare for the game that means more to them than any on their schedule, the battle with Pitt in the Pitt Stadium on Thanksgiving Day. Fortunately, the lads came out of the struggle in the Yankee Stadium in good shape and will be at the peak of physical condition for their date Thursday.

It looks like Grove City is going to give some of its old district rivals the go-bye for next fall. So far the Crimson has dropped both Geneva and Waynesburg from the schedule, causing no little consternation at Beaver Falls and at the home of the Yellow Jackets. They can't understand it, but after all, it seems to be Bob Thorn's business as to what elevens he schedules.

The Dukes announced today that they were doing business with Denver University for a home-and-home gridiron series, the first game to be played next fall, probably at Denver.

BUYER'S GUIDE AND BUSINESS REVIEW

MONEY CONTROL MAY REBOUND TO CONGRESS

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Business statistics in November, suggesting a new equilibrium at a lower level, indicate that the reaction from the spring recovery has run its course.

Mr. Rukeyser

Obviously, the current subnormal level is not a satisfactory one at which to stabilize, yet the prospects for holding the line should be encouraging in face of the wild talk and pessimistic propaganda disseminated by the orthodox and reactionary interests.

The primary objective should be to raise the gross volume of business and employment, and this can be accomplished, as was shown by the experience of the country from March to mid-July, by narrowing the gaps within the price structure.

By eliminating the disparities between raw material prices and prices for finished goods, and by bringing the cost of capital goods more in line with those of consumption goods, the country removes the barriers to a free movement of goods and services.

BALANCE ESSENTIAL

Neither the "sound money" extremists nor the visionary monetary reformers should deter us from the path to sound economic regeneration, which must be based on conditions of balance which enable the vast social groups, farmers, industrial workers, and the service employes freely to exchange the products of their hours of labor.

No money magic of either school will obviate the need for sound economic management, and for conscious efforts to eliminate trade destroying disparities, which make barter among the great social groups difficult.

Wild inflationists in and out of Congress have long had their day in court, and it is doubtless salutary as an antidote for the orthodox groups to become vocal, as they recently have.

MANDATORY STEPS POSSIBLE

Unless the critics of the administration, however, eschew cheap emotionalism and show an increased respect for the realities, they may throw control from the President, who is receptive to reasonable technical advice, back to Congress, which may make mandatory some of the inflationary laws which at present are discretionary with the President.

President Roosevelt is not expecting monetary magic to get us out of the depression by itself, but regards the money policy as only one step in the recovery program. Unless the conservatives deal with objective data dispassionately, they may unwittingly play into the hands of their enemies, the unbridled inflationists.

Yet the critics of the administration have pointed to the softness of government bonds.

TWO FACTORS

The price change in government bonds seems primarily ascribable to two developments, first, to the cessation of the demand resulting from the open market purchases by the Federal Reserve banks, and, secondly, to sales of governments by those who wanted cash with which to escape the dollar.

Apart from monetary policy, the credit of the government has been improving in recent months. The vigor of President Roosevelt in controlling operating expenses of government and his courage in dealing even with the sacrosanct subject of pensions is responsible for this.

In the first four months of the current fiscal year, starting on July 1, Treasury receipts have been substantially larger than a year ago, and meantime ordinary expenses of government were very much smaller. Even extraordinary emergency expenditures were only a trifle larger than in the previous year.

TREASURY DEFICIT CUT

Accordingly, the Treasury deficit at the end of last month was less than half as large as that of the previous year under Hoover, indicating a net improvement of half a billion dollars. Moreover, the Treasury position is further helped by the influx of revenue from the new taxes on liquor, made possible by the accomplishment of prohibition repeal.

Even the extraordinary expenditures contemplated will in large part be offset by assets purchased in the form of paper of lenders and otherwise.

Accordingly there is no real question about the position of the Treasury—only uncertainty concerning the dollar. Meantime, the Treasury can finance itself by the sale of short-term paper.

Frank A. Vanderlip also suggested that the interest of investors be safeguarded by providing that the return of funds on new government bonds be determined by the purchasing power of money, as measured by the commodity price index. Such a bond would be attractive to investors as the safest type of hedge against inflation.

Earning Their Way as They Study Art

STUDENTS EARN MONEY

Art students today have many opportunities to earn money while they go to school, according to Willis Shook, director of the Art Institute of Pittsburgh, Stanwix street.

For example, with Christmas about a month off, several students in the night show card class are earning part of their tuition, he said, by selling Christmas card ideas to various companies. He continued:

"Advertising agencies particularly find services of students valuable. An idea when placed before a class produces 50 or 60 sketches from which a choice can be made. Not only commercial art but commissions for 21 murals were taken and executed within the past 12 months."

Even in our worst depression years, Shook said, several students have earned their entire tuition from the sale of their drawings.

The Young Men and Women Hebrew Association presented Henry Harris, pianist, as second soloist in its series last night. There was a rousing audience and several encores after the trying program.

Mr. Lissfelt

Being usually on the same side of the footlights with this young player during performance, I had the unique experience of hearing him somewhat impersonally again after a year. That there have been tremendous changes in his playing is quite evident.

The program last night was not built for display of a brilliant technique, though one sensed there was skill enough in his 10 fingers. On the contrary one felt a deeper understanding of every work, a far subtler and more refined attitude toward whatever tone can be got out of a piano, and a manipulation of that tone towards its truest musical meaning.

Evidences of this were many, especially in the delicate singing of the andante in the Brahms, in the many truly pianistic variations of Glazounow, in the little tone poem of John Ireland, and in the Chopin towards whose music this young artist is just now maturing.

If one looked for a blending of the musical with the element of fireworks, then the Prokofieff, I should say, was an excellent example, for he saved this rather banal piece with a grace that astonished us all.

As encores the Brahms C Major Intermezzo, Debussy's "La Terrasse des Audiences au Clair de la Lune" and the Chopin A Flat Major "Polonaise" kept the audience asking for more.

PROGRAM

Quartet in C Minor	Brahms
Scherzo	Egon Wellesz
Serenade	Swan Hennessy
Tongataboo	Ernst Bloch
Quartet in F Minor	Gaspar Cassado

The Shapiro Quartet with unchanged personnel gave its opening concert yesterday afternoon in the Hotel Schenley. The audience was larger than on former occasions and listened to a rather profound program.

The Brahms Quartet has long been a favorite though not too easily comprehended on so rare hearings. In Wellesz we had a tidbit of the post-Schoenberg school, one of the neatest miniatures out of this period.

In the Serenade Hennessy has given us all the Celtic color in his own original ideas. Bloch's Tongatoboo is a reminiscence of the South Sea Islands, charming in both color and rhythm.

Cassado's Quartet is the work of a classicist. It has none of the obvious Spanish earmarks, but much of the sombre character which one meets in Iberian mountains and so easily learned in her painting.

The quartet was in excellent form. The opening of the Brahms lacked the richness of timbre which we expect from this work, but in all the other works we found not only a deeper spirit for the ensemble, niceties of rhythm and design, but a greater fluency of expression than last year.

The music was enthusiastically received and the encore, a minuet of Hasse, proved to be another dainty confection.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

FRANCE FORMS NEW CABINET

PARIS, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—A cabinet differing little from the one it succeeded and apparently with little more hope for a lengthy survival was formed by Premier-elect Camille Chautemps today.

The ministry rallied by Chautemps, who was appointed by President Lebrun after the overthrow last Friday of the cabinet of Albert Sarraut, bore unmistakable markings of the influence of Edouard Herriot.

In fact, the stamp was so plain that many believed the new government was designed chiefly to prepare the way for the former Premier's comeback — probably about December 15.

This date was mentioned because Herriot has insisted he would not re-enter the office until after December 14—anniversary of his downfall when the cabinet refused to support his debt program.

Money Problems Provide Principal Subject of Discussion

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

INFLATION AGAINST stability—the controlled dollar against the gold dollar—monetary problems are major subjects of discussion today. Never since the time of Bryan's presidential campaigns, when bimetallism was the leading political and economic question, has the general public taken so great an interest in the ordinarily dull subject of economics.

There has been so much misapprehension about the various aspects of the problems involved in changing monetary conditions that an explanation of some of the terms used and of some of the principals followed may be of interest.

First of all, what does the gold standard mean? The United States and most of the leading countries of the world are off this standard, France may go off it in the near future. It happens that there are two kinds of gold standards. Well, what are they?

Gold Standard To Be Defined

ONE KIND IS a gold monetary standard. The other is a gold bullion standard.

Until March 4, the United States was on a gold monetary standard. This meant that paper money was exchangeable into gold money on equal terms. An ounce of gold was worth $20.67. If a person had gold to sell he could dispose of it at the United States mint for this price and he could get payment either in paper money or in gold money. If he had paper money he could get gold money for it or he could buy gold in an uncoined state.

A gold bullion standard differs in some respects. A government on such a standard has no gold coins in circulation. It will, however, buy gold in bars or other large quantities and pay a specified amount in its paper money for it. It will also sell gold in bars and accept in payment its paper money on the same basis. Most gold bars are worth about $10,000 in United States gold coin.

While the ordinary individual never sees a gold coin, such a country is considered to be on a gold basis since its currency in large amounts can be redeemed in gold.

Our Money No Longer Redeemable in Gold

NATIONS PRINT paper currency since it makes possible the circulation of a larger volume of money than if circulation were limited to actual gold coins. The proportions of gold held in treasuries or central banks to paper money varies in different countries.

In this country the Federal Reserve System was required to have a gold reserve of 40 per cent of the value of currency outstanding.

The bank troubles in this country on the eve of the inauguration created such a fear in the minds of persons in other countries that there was a rush to convert their American securities into their own money; there was a rush to convert any credits they might have in American banks into their own money; there was a rush to convert any American dollars they held into their own money.

All these factors caused a panic to change our dollars into gold. Now, governments, their treasuries and their central banks, and our Federal Reserve is a type of central bank, are much like ordinary banks. They can pay their obligations as long as only part of their creditors want their money at one time. They cannot pay if they all want it at once. This was what was happening last March.

The embargo on gold meant that we were off the gold standard. This action was taken before the Federal Reserve system actually was bankrupt. It was taken to prevent the exportation of our gold resources. The country still was solvent, but it would have become insolvent if drains on its gold had continued indefinitely. The action taken was similar to a voluntary petition in bankruptcy to prevent certain creditors from getting all the assets while others were left in the cold.

Other aspects of monetary problems will be discussed in future columns.

STOCK MARKET SAGS IN DULL TRADING

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—The flowers of inflation seemed to have lost some more of their speculative bloom today and stocks and staples slipped to lower levels in rather dull trading.

Currency stabilization hopes were given further encouragement by the fact that the RFC again failed to boost the domestic gold rate. The British pound slumped some 12 cents and the French franc was down about .14 of a cent. Grains, cotton, rubber and silver futures sagged. There were some resistant equity spots, notably the alcohols, but the metals were heavy along with a number of industrial specialties. United States government securities again moved up substantially.

Shares up fractionally included National Distillers, Schenley, American Commercial Alcohol and United States Industrial Alcohol. Homestake Mining dropped 7, United States Smelting 5, while losers of a point of more included McIntyre, Dome and Cerro De Pasco, Case and Western Union yielded 4 points and International Harvester and Allied Chemical lost more than 2. American Telephone, United States Steel, Consolidated Gas, Sears, Roebuck, Johns-Manville, General Motors, Chrysler and Westinghouse showed recessions of fractions to 2 or more.

Wall street opinion, despite jumpy price fluctuations, was mildly optimistic. Some odd-lot brokers reported a fair amount of purchases for cash on the various dips.

The holding of the domestic gold price at $33.76 an ounce since last Tuesday was interpreted in some quarters as pointing toward dollar stabilization. Various financial commentators, however, feel that the administration must work the gold rate up to around $36 in order to thoroughly test its manipulating program for the raising of commodity prices.

Most bankers were counseling against premature conclusions regarding inflationary potentialities. Here, it is pointed out that thus far there has been no actual currency expansion and that the purchasing power of the dollar cannot be easily demolished even should this be intended. So far as buying power is concerned, some observers recalled that a 60-cent dollar now will buy much more than the 70-cent dollar in July because of the reaction in prices and business since the summer months.

Most banking circles feel that the return of the dollar to gold, on a bullion instead of coin basis, is necessary before business and industry can gain any real momentum on the advance. These "sound money" advocates believe that it is not so important whether the dollar is placed on a 50, 55, 60 or 70-cent base, but, it is contended, erratic trade currents will continue to prevail so long as the stated value of the monetary unit is problematical.

The Knoxville, Tenn., vote in approval of a bond issue to provide a municipally-owned electric power system was of much interest to followers of the public utility stocks, who fear that leading corporations may have to further decrease rates.

GRAINS SUFFER SHARP DROP

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—Grain prices underwent decided new setbacks early today. In the main, selling was associated with absence of any official statement regarding the Washington administration's future financial policy. Opening unchanged to 1⅛ lower, wheat afterward declined all around. Corn started ¼-⅛ off, and subsequently receded further.

Giving additional momentum to downward swings of the wheat market was a sharp break in British exchange. Wheat soon showed a loss of nearly 2 cents a bushel, with numerous speculative traders selling wheat against purchases of corn. Later wheat rallied more than a cent and corn developed notable firmness.

FEDERALS LEAD RECOVERY IN BONDS

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Bonds clung to the dollar during the past week and both rallied substantially as the currency stabilization warfare was waged briskly on various fronts.

United States government securities led the upturn, after dropping sharply following Prof. O. M. W. Sprague's resignation from the Treasury and his denunciation of the administration's monetary program. The federals recovered quickly in response to reassuring offical statements as to the maintenance of the government's credit and announcement that surplus funds of the Treasury would be used from time to time to purchase the bonds.

While there was some official buying during the week, the Federal Reserve System reported that for the first time since last May it had not added any government obligations to its portfolio. Instead, its total holdings during the week showed a decline of $508,000. The decrease, however, was explained as a purely technical bookkeeping shift.

The cessation of the open market campaign, it was understood, was due to the fact that member banks now have a plethora of excess reserves amounting to around $850,000,000. Until these excess funds can be moved into industry and trade, the reserve authorities were said to feel that any further increase was unnecessary.

Proponents of dollar stabilization were cheered by the sharp recovery of the unit in foreign exchange markets and, whether because of this or for other reasons, prime investment corporation loans recorded a spirited advance and even secondary issues, which were supposed to improve with the growth of inflationary sentiment, displayed a firm front. Although the R. F. C. for several days held the domestic gold price unchanged, there was no intimation from Washington that the government's monetary policies would be revised.

Obligations of some of the foreign governments whose currencies reacted were under pressure. Substantial losses were recorded by issues of France, Dutch East Indies, Switzerland and the United Kingdom. On the other hand, loans of Germany were firm.

DOLLAR SHOWS STRENGTH

LONDON, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—The United States dollar recovered part of its early weakness, in which it touched $5.25 to the pound, good support strengthening the rate to $5.22¾ at noon today.

The French franc weakened and was marked at noon at 84.43 to the pound compared to Saturday's figure of 83.84.

Late in the day the dollar strengthened sharply to 5.08 to the pound on receipt of the news from the United States that the gold price was unchanged.

The dollar opened today at $5.24 to the pound and then eased to $5.24¼.

Moving in a narrow range Saturday, the dollar closed at $5.20¼, after having opened at $5.19 in relation to the pound.

Bar gold declined 1 shilling 2½ pence to 125s 3½d. (U. S. equivalent $32.83 on basis of sterling opening at $5.24).

PARIS, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—The United States dollar closed on the foreign exchange market today with a quotation of 16.32 francs (6.12 cents to the franc), a figure 25 centimes higher than Saturday's official close of 16.07 (6.21 cents). The dollar opened today at 16.06 fracs (6.22 cents).

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Silver futures are off 50 points in response to the cables and weakness in sterling.

STEEL OUTPUT EXPANDS

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 27.—(AP.)—Gains in steel operations which last week lifted the national average half a point to 28 per cent without heavy purchasing by railroads and the automobile industry, and considerable underlying strength manifest in demand for iron and steel lend hope that the month of December will top November, the magazine Steel said today.

This would be a reversal of the usual seasonal trend. The increase in purchasing, the weekly review said, can be traced to the general desire of consumers to take in the bulk of the material due them on fourth-quarter contracts. It continued:

"Last week the first of the 1934 automobile models came off the assembly line, and though some makers are shutting down for inventories, steel releases as a whole are beginning to expand. Larger buying by the railroads and for public works is expected to be an early development. Confidence of the steel industry, therefore, is not now being diminished by the customary year-end influences."

Steelworks operations for the week increased 1 point to 22 per cent at Pittsburgh; 1 to 32 at Youngstown; 2 to 48 at Cleveland; 5 to 51 at Wheeling and 5 to 75 in New England. The rate declined 9 ot 36 at Detroit; ½ to 17 in Eastern Pennsylvania and remained unchanged at 32 in Buffalo, 20 in Birmingham and 29 at Chicago.

R. F. C. Pays Same Price for New Gold

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The Reconstruction Finance Corporation announces it will pay $33.76 an ounce for today's purchases of newly-mined domestic gold. This is the same price as has prevailed since Tuesday of the past week and compares with today's London price of $32.75, based on sterling at 5:22¾.

Chicago Stock Yard Employes Strike

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—Asking for approximately a 50 per cent increase in wages, several hundred livestock handlers employed by the Union Stockyards Company have walked out while additional employes have voted to strike today.

The strike stopped the hog market.

MacARTHUR ASKS BIGGER ARMY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt, whose budget bureau already has approved an increase in naval and marine forces, will be requested to ask Congress for funds to raise America's Army strength from "below the danger line."

It is at that point now, says the Army's highest ranking officer, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, in an annual report to the Secretary of War, which will be transmitted to the President.

MacArthur found that although the United States is seventeenth in world strength that alone is no cause for particular worry since America's needs are different. But in recommending an increase in regular Army enlisted strength from 120,000 to 165,000; expenditure of around $200,000,000 on aircraft, modernization and motorization of artillery and similar projects, and restoration of other funds eliminated in recent years, MacArthur added:

Junior Patrol Mail Box

That gives us a good idea how

Junior Patrols and Junior Patrol members can help others. If there is anyone in your neighborhood who won't have dessert for dinner, wouldn't it make them happy to take them some plum pudding or pumpkin pie? You bet it would, and we hope some of our members will have enough to share with others.

Many of our members are interested in safety now, and they are learning more about it in school. Here's a letter from La Verne Grohs, of 212 Hickman street, Bridgeville. He sends a pledge and this letter:

"I would like to have a membership an some safety first things bec e we are studying about safet irst and would like to have some more rules."

Just keep watching the mail box, La Verne. We have printed safety rules in the Mail Box several times now, and we are going to keep doing it. One great big safety rule that is always good is "BE CAREFUL."

And how about you, Bob McMurtry, of 47 S. Jackson street? Why don't you start a patrol?

A long-distance member today and a new captain is Virginia Klutch, of 2304 W. Market street, Warren, O. She says in her letter:

"I follow the Junior Patrol in the Sun-Telegraph every evening and I am joining it. I would like to have a club and I have 12 members. They all are glad to join. So will you please send us 12 membership cards and an official emblem?"

Surest thing you know, Virginia, and it won't be long before you get your armband and you all have your cards and badges. Write and tell us how you get along, and what you do to help others.

Regina Helger, of 725 Schiller street, Baden, Pa., writes:

"I want to start a Junior Patrol Club here in Baden. I am sending 10 pledges."

Your handwriting is very pretty, Regina, and we hope you will write some more and tell us how your club gets along in the near future. Your armband will soon be on the way.

OPERATOR 13

clickety click over the wire, and young Mr. Barry read it aloud, by ear, as it rattled in. "What else have you to report?"

"Lady Greensleeves is in Emmitsburg, at the old Morris house. I could catch her if I had somebody to go back with me."

Major Allen replied: "Ask General Buford to detail a platoon. Your reports through Operators 106 and 90 have been checked up and are correct. Where is H. B. Smith?"

"Who is H. B. Smith?" she asked Barry.

Must Be Caught

"My boss, chief detective for the middle department of Maryland, Delaware and Virginia. He's somewhere in town."

Back came Major Allen: "See whether H. B. Smith can help you out. I understand from General McClellan that the last trooper left is chasing Stuart. Tell Smith for God's sake to catch that woman. Do you know whether she'll be there in Emmitsburg if I send Operators 106 and 90 after her from Knoxville?"

"She has orders to go to False Cape and signal a Rebel blockade runner called the Miranda."

"Is that certain?"

"Turn in the letter to H. B. Smith. Tell him I am sending Operators 106 and 20 to False Cape. I want you to go on there yourself and aid them to intercept this woman before she can go to England and raise hell there. This is a deadly important matter. You are to draw any supplies and money you require from H. B. Smith. This telegram is your warrant.

"You go by way of Baltimore and Norfolk to Back Bay, on the Virginia border. Don't lose a moment. I want that woman either taken or destroyed!"

"Your orders shall be obeyed, sir," telegraphed Barry.

"Then: "Sign off," came the clicking signal; and the episode was concluded.

"Oh, glory!" said the boy admiringly. "Talk of romance!"

Operator 13 began to weep forlornly. "I'm so deathly tired," she sniveled.

CHAPTER XLII.

"Let's steal in very quietly, because we mustn't arouse the servants who might mistake us for burglars and shoot us or something" giggled Rhoda Vane.

Jack Brilling had been unable to drive up to the front door because only a narrow path led to the ranch house, and there were many trees around.

He parked his car at some distance, and Rhoda led him to the side of the house where the dining room was,

"We'll find plenty of drinks in here."

He struck a match.

And all the time Rhoda's ears were cocked to hear the sound of Tony's voice . . . a footfall.

But the living room was on the other side of the house and she heard nothing.

"Don't do that—you newly married man! I'm surprised at you!"

But Rhoda was flattered, none the less. She didn't believe for a moment he loved Madeleine. He probably still had "a pash" for herself!

SURPRISES PAIR

"This is too near the servants' quarters. They may hear us. Let's go over to the living room," she whispered to Brilling.

They tiptoed down the passage, turned to the left and went down the corridor.

In front of the dying embers of the fire and very close together on the wide settee, they saw the backs of two heads . . .

Rhoda drew a sharp breath, called out in a high-pitched voice: "Is that you, Tony?"

The figures swung about. Tony and Nollie! A shaft of moonlight showing through a high window illuminated their two faces.

"For the love of Pete," said Rhoda irritably, "can't anybody strike a match?"

"I can," said Brilling in an uncertain voice. Had he dreamed the vision of that face? Up here at Redwood it couldn't possibly be the same little secretary?

Rhoda lifted a candle from a table and Jack put a light to the wick.

Rhoda carried the candle forward like a beacon. She would embarrass this little upstart if she could.

"Hello, Rhoda. Hello there, Jack. Forgive me for running away from your celebration, but I was all in," apologized Tony.

RHODA PLEASED

He turned as he spoke towards Nollie, to effect an introduction between her and the bridegroom.

"Miss Day, may I present Jack Brilling—one of the best and a brand-new husband!"

In the light of the candle Rhoda held, he saw Nollie's chin go up and her lovely eyes widen.

"Miss Day and I have met before. We were good friends weren't we, Miss Day?" said Brilling, anxious to give her the correct lead, to set the tempo of this embarrassing meeting.

Nollie bowed frigidly. She ignored his outstretched hand. She said nothing.

Her throat felt tight. Her breath was taken away. And yet she wanted, desperately, to carry off this situation.

With Tony looking surprisedly from one to the other of them, Nollie felt sick and faint.

But speak she would. In her attitude to Tony before, there had been quite enough camouflage.

"I worked in Mr. Brilling's office for a time," said Nollie in a strange, stiff voice. "I was his stenographer, Tony."

"And he carried on with her, no doubt—she's showing that he did!" thought Rhoda triumphantly and venomously.

Tony, indeed! She dared to call the young man that! They, too, were on terms of familiarity!

But this would surely put a spoke in Nollie's wheel. Rhoda was glad to the soul that she had brought Jack Brilling here, to comfort his ex-secretary.

"You were invaluable in the office," announced Brilling in an equally nervous voice. He turned to Tony. "Miss Ray—I mean Day—did an enormous amount of work for us."

"And why, pray, did you let this paragon escape?" Rhoda gave a sneering little laugh.

"Because we overworked her and she ran away, and who could blame her!" said Brilling, almost too glibly.

"Ha! the plot thickens," exclaimed Rhoda, lifting the candle a little higher, and looking from Brilling to Nollie.

"For heaven's sake, are you posing as the Goddess of Liberty or what? Can't you put that thing down, Rhoda?" exclaimed Tony.

"Well, the comparison is apt, because this certainty is Liberty Hall if anywhere is," said Rhoda, meaningly, with a swift glance at Nollie.

"I'll fix the lights," said Nollie with stiff lips. She took the candle from Rhoda.

"Miss Day is versatile. She's Jill-of-all-trades and at home wherever she goes," commented the older woman.

Tony opened his mouth as though to speak, then sat down again.

There was something strange about this situation. Something that eluded him, he couldn't say just what it was.

Nollie had lit the other candles now. The place was brighter.

She had slipped from the room. Why so? Was it because of Rhoda's innuendoes?

Or—the thought was like a stab—was it because something queer had happened between herself and this bridegroom?

Nollie had known that they were dining there tonight! Why hadn't she said that she had known Jack Brilling?

Synopsis

Nollie Day, stenographer at an exclusive hotel, is befriended by wealthy Mrs. Judson, a widow. Nollie goes to a theater in place of Mrs. Judson, where she meets handsome Tony O'Brien. She reveals her own identity but Tony does not hear her. Next day, Tony telephones and learns Mrs. Judson has gone abroad. Nollie wants to clear her identity, but is unable to get in touch with Tony. Mrs. Judson returns and ask Nollie to become her secretary and visit her ranch. Nollie accompanies Mrs. Judson to a garden party and meets Rhoda Vane. Rhoda seems to dislike Nollie. Nollie and the widow leave for the ranch after inviting Rhoda. Nollie is surprised when she meets Tony near the ranch. Tony is pleased when she tells him she is not Mrs. Judson. Rhoda visits the ranch. She is rude to Nollie, but plainly tries to gain Tony's favor. Tony confesses that he loves Nollie. Jack Brilling and his bride are on a honeymoon near the Judson place. Tony slips away from their party to see Nollie.

TREATY OF PARIS—BRITISH ACKNOWLEDGE UNITED STATES

After the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown (Oct. 19, 1781), the armed struggle for American liberation ended; but it was almost two years until Great Britain recognized the independence of the United States. The definite treaty was signed Sept. 3, 1783, at Paris (see American signers and signatures above). It extended the territory of the Union to the Mississippi River. (U. S. History)

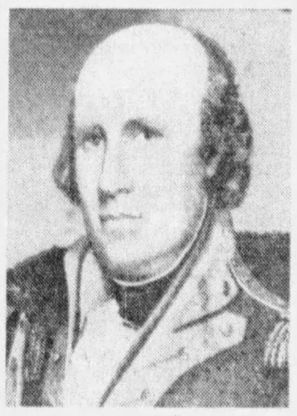
ECONOMIC ACTIVITY OF THE ROMANS

The vast empire of the Caesars was built upon a strong organization governing civic life, providing means of transportation (roads, ships), encouraging commerce with far-away lands. The rich Roman had everything the world produced at that time: Metals from Britain, cloth from Gaul, precious stones, carpets and rugs from Persia and India, silk from China, etc.

Above: Shipping scene on the Tiber; right: a Roman rug shop in times of the Caesars. (World History)



G. R. CLARK—"WASHINGTON OF THE WEST"

Parallel to the War of Independence of the 13 American colonies, George Rogers Clark, young Virginian, started a campaign against the British in the territory between the Allegheny and Mississippi rivers arousing the population for the cause of liberation. The capture of the British post, Vincennes (north of the Ohio River) besides other victories by Clark were instrumental later in the ceding of this territory to the United States in the treaty of Paris (1783). For this accomplishment, Clark is called "Washington of the West." (U. S. History)

AIR CRAFT, HEAVIER THAN AIR

Man believed that to fly all he needed was wings. Even such a genius as Leonardo da Vinci (1452-1519) made designs for a flying mechanism actuated by muscular power (above). Besnier, a French locksmith, constructed (1678) hinged flaps connected to rods to be worked by hands and feet; it is said that he succeeded in gliding across a river. The first successful gliders were constructed by the German Otto Lilienthal, who made over a thousand flights and crashing with a glider, became a martyr of flying (1896). (Transportation)

DUCKING OF A COMMON SCOLD

Much damage is done by slander—telling untruths about others behind their backs. It is unworthy not only to every self-respecting boy and girl, but also is a violation of the law, and is punishable. Our forefathers applied the ducking-chair to cure the scolding habit. (Character Building)

PASTEURIZING MILK—SAFEGUARD AGAINST INFECTION

ELECTRONIC THEORY OF MATTER—ELECTRONS AND PROTONS AS SMALLEST CONSTITUENTS

Dalton conceived the atom as the smallest particle of matter. Crookes (1879) and Thompson (1897) experimenting with tubes containing highly rarified gases (1/1000 atmospheric pressure and less) with sealed—in electrodes—between which electricity was discharged—observed glowing of the tube walls. This was due to radiation emitted from the cathode (— electrode) toward the anode (+ electrode); these rays were called cathode rays and found to consist of minute particles with negative electric charges, called electrons. As they are similar regardless of the gas or cathode used, they must be constituents of every matter. (Above left). This led to the electronic theory stating that matter is built from electrons (negative particles of electricity) and equal number of protons (positive electric particles) forming together the electrically neutral atom. The Building Plans Are Interrupted

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

To imitate successful persons or a particular individual is your ambition.

Perhaps you have expended many hours trying to draw a face or an animal like one by the really great artists, whose work you admire.

What good did all this copying do you?

If your only desire is to do something that your friends will immediately say looks like the work of another, go ahead.

But repeating the process will not put you ahead in art.

It is the same in writing.

You immediately try to write something that will sound like his work.

Perhaps you copy the trade name as nearly as you dare and ease your conscience by writing on different subjects from those already out under that trade name. What is the result?

It is going to ease comment and the one who used the name first will be the one who is considered original.

You perhaps think that the way to earn a living is to catch on to the tail of another's kite, but you will lose your identity eventually, so be original.

Hark! The Dinner Bell

We don't mind the young girl going west with Mae. Looks like the blimp silhouette is again popular.

But there is trouble ahead for the young man who remained east with Horace Greeley. And it's all due to Miss West's menu.

"I'm buxom and blonde," said Mae some well-nourished years ago. "I eat plenty of creamed chicken on buttered toast and lobster a la Newburgh."

That's a gold standard appetite. And for the young man it means there is not balm in Gilead or a wagon lunch.

What it means is that the gals are going to eat again. And again. They're back on the 18-day diet twice a week and three times a day.

No more Melba toast and cucumber juice. You cannot wave a triumphant spoon over Newburgh lobster for less than $3 a scoop. When you take your gal out on Wednesday night it is going to cost you 15 unhoarded dollars.

For seven years the girls have been reducing in an effort to crash the movies. The wampas babies were all slim, slender and tooth-picky. Miss West changed all that. She ran Garbo and Dietrich off the lot and dusted off that ancient beauty formula: Fat plus 40 equals fair.

Mae has done all young fellows wrong. There was a time when your little sweety had a bird appetite. Now, when the waiter hands her a menu all she does is cross out the date line and say, "and three cups of coffee."

So there will be a gnashing of pearly teeth and a wailing of consomme on the gulp.

The boys realize that the seven lean years are over and that Mahatma Gandhi is on his own.

It is going to be good for the farmer who will raise more wheat and cattle six days of the week and come to town on Saturday night. The famine is no longer feminine.

The girls are eating again. Elbows are back on the table. That means the boys are on the diet.

The County Work Plan

If New Legislation Is Necessary to Promote It, the Legislature Should Enact It.

The County Commissioners desire to borrow $31,000,000 from the federal government for self-liquidating projects which would provide work for 15,000 men for 18 months.

They say it is not desirable to borrow the money in the usual way. They propose instead that a private corporation be formed to handle the projects.

If the reason is that the county's borrowing capacity will not stand an additional loan of $31,000,000, legislation proposed by Congressman Henry Ellenbogen which would exempt self-liquidating bonds from consideration in calculating the municipal debt limit might solve the problem.

Legislation of some sort apparently is necessary to put the plan into effect, and the Legislature should enact it.

A Dismal Prospect

Allegheny County Will Have Fewer Children but More Adults in a Few Years.

Did you see that gay throng of happy children watching the parade on Saturday?

Make the most of your opportunities to enjoy children, for the number of youngsters in Allegheny County is declining.

The scholarly Bureau of Social Research reports that the county's population will include fewer children but more adults in 1940 than it did in 1930, that in 10 years the number of deaths may equal the number of births, and social workers will have to concern themselves more with old age pensions, homes for the aged, and the treatment of patients with chronic ailments.

The community will be made up largely of the aged and the middle-aged. Not a very happy prospect!

The Nebula in Andromeda

Mastodons Roamed This Region When the Light One Sees Now Started Towards the Earth.

This is a good season in which to see the nebula in Andromeda, the most remote object visible to the naked eye.

Around 8 or 9 o'clock in the evening, if it is clear, you will see in the northern central part of the sky a W outlined by bright stars, the constellation of Cassiopeia, and south of it a square outlined by four stars, the constellation of Pegasus. Midway between them lies the nebula in Andromeda, a tiny blur of light, almost directly overhead.

It is not only the most distant object visible to the naked eye, but in the northern hemisphere it is the only object visible to the naked eye outside of our galactic system. It is at least five times as far away as anything else you will see in the heavens.

It is so far away that it takes its light, traveling at the rate of 186,000 miles a second, just a shade less than a million years to reach us. The distance across the nebula is 50,000 light years.

When the light with which you view the nebula started on its journey, the earth was in what geologists call the Tertiary Period. Mastodons and the early horses and camels were roaming these parts. The saber-toothed tigers, wooly rhinoceroses and giant sloths came later. Man had not yet appeared.

The Ohio River at that time, and the upper Allegheny, flowed northward into a valley which has since been occupied by Lake Erie. But the Great Lakes did not exist then, for they were formed by an immense glacier, which had just started to creep southward from the Far North.

Welfare Fund Imperiled

The Community Will Face a Serious Situation If the Annual Campaign Fails.

The disturbing announcement is made that the Welfare Fund's annual campaign is falling far short of its goal.

About one-third of the homes in the county have never given anything for the support of the institutions and activities that depend on the Welfare Fund for their continued existence, and yet they share in the benefits.

What would happen if the Welfare Fund were to be abandoned?

Public health nurses would not be available to assist in the treatment of sick persons in poverty-stricken homes.

Boys who now spend their evenings in wholesome games in settlement houses would loaf on street corners and get into mischief and crime.

Orphanages and other kinds of homes for the unfortunates would have to close.

We dare not run the risk of experiencing these and the other evils that will result from collapse of the Welfare Fund.

People with incomes who have not given must give, and those who have already given must give more.

Times Change

But Stories Don't.

America's first clubhouse, built 700 years before Christopher Columbus discovered us, has just been dug up near Santa Fe, New Mexico.

The club was used by the Pueblo Indians, where the men of the tribe gathered to gamble and swap stories.

Ladies were not admitted.

Some idea of the antiquity of this institution may be gained from the fact that when it was built, the Mohammedans were conquering Spain and Haroun-al-Raschid of the Arabian Nights was the Caliph of Bagdad.

But even in those remote days, the problems of men the world over seem to have been much the same as they are today. They needed a place where they could escape from their womenfolk, talk over the football scores or whatever was then the equivalent of football, have a quiet drink, and possibly play pinochle.

No bar rail has been discovered in the Pueblo club, but undoubtedly there was one.

And undoubtedly that was where some Indian told the story about Pat and Mike, or the farmer's daughter and the traveling salesman—and got the "raspberry" from his audience, even as happens in Pittsburgh speakeasies today.

Times may change, but the habits of the male sex in 792, A. D., were probably no different from those in 1933.

And the stories no newer.

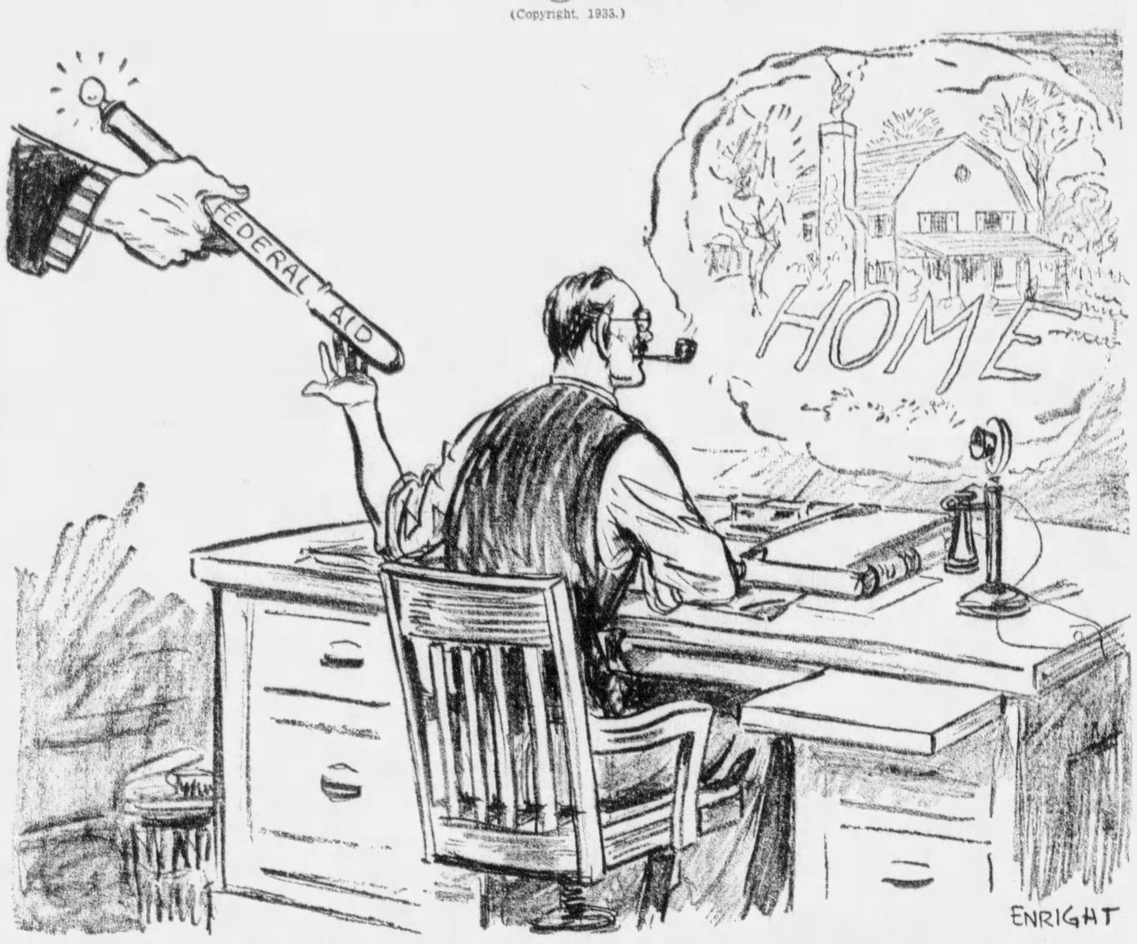
The Magic Wand

(Copyright, 1933.)



Some twenty cities are to have Federal help in low-cost housing projects, reports Secretary Ickes, the Public Works Administrator.

An allotment of $100,000,000 has been made already to the new Federal Emergency Housing Corporation to carry on the rehousing plan.

At the same time—and perhaps more important—the Federal Home Loan and Savings Administration is chartering and financing local associations which will enable hundreds of families to acquire their own homes while construction costs are low.

The Government's home-building policies are of very great value both socially and economically. One of Theodore Roosevelt's ideals was to see America become more and more a nation of independent home owners. And, undertaken now, the policy under way contributes immediately to industrial recovery. As Secretary Ickes has said:

"It will open widespread employment in the hard hit building trades on projects of great social value."

For many a family Federal aid may be the magic wand by which its dreams of a pleasant home are made to come true.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

What Are You . . . What Do You Want?

Hitherto, your life has been pretty much of a mess, hasn't it?

Yes—there were times when everything seemed jake on the surface, but secretly you knew they weren't. Inwardly you were discontented, restless, confused—always wanting something you didn't have—dissatisfaction after you got it. And many a time you've wondered, miserably, if it was possible for any man to feel settled and happy.

Yes, it is. If you could answer two simple questions, you, too, could be settled and happy.

WHAT ARE YOU?

WHAT DO YOU WANT?

These two questions hold the secret of your life's success or failure.

What are you? What sort of a person? Have you ever tried to discover? Chances are you haven't. Instead of thinking about what sort of a person you really are, you've spent your time in thinking about what sort of a person you'd like to be.

When you were a little tad, you spent hours in day dreaming, imagining yourself in different roles. You were a policeman—or a beautiful actress—or a famous fighter—or a dancer—scores of roles. And, as a child, you never doubted your perfect ability to fill any of them.

Then, later on, you realized that mightn't be so easy. But still you were sure that you might be almost anything you pleased "if you could get the breaks." Meaning what? Meaning that you'd have to have money, and pull, and the right friends, and maybe a chance to study. But, given these helps, you could be what you wished.

But you were wrong. We can't be "whatever we wish to be" even if we "have the breaks." We have, it is true, many sides to our natures. We are attracted by widely different personalities. We enjoy picturing ourselves in those roles. But we couldn't actually LIVE those roles.

For there are certain definite limits within each one of us. There are certain things we can be—certain things we'd enjoy being and could succeed in being. And just as surely there are certain things we can't be—and wouldn't like being if we could.

Do you know what those things are, in your own life? Do you know your own capacities or limitations? Or have you gone through life following one will-o'-the-wisp personally after the other? Deciding one day to be a Mae West or Greta Garbo—the next to be a Janet Gaynor or a Lillian Gish? Or, if you're a man, seeing yourself alternately as sailor, hobo, aviator, explorer, big-business-man, racketeer?

That's what you've really done, isn't it? And then you wondered why you were "never satisfied with your life." But the simple truth was — YOU never had any life. YOU never were any special person. You were just a miscellaneous lot of impulses, some of which expressed your true self and your real ability—but the majority of which fitted you as poorly as tail feather would fit a turtle.

Then there's that second question—WHAT DO YOU WANT?

But the answer to that is the same as the answer to the first question. You haven't known what you wanted any more than you've known what you are. You had new wants with each new personality. And so you drifted along—getting exactly nowhere.

Unhappy? Of course you were. But you kept hoping that something would turn up—that chance would come some day and you'd "find your place in life."

But the chance has never came. And it never will come. We don't FIND our place in life—we MAKE it. We make it by deciding WHAT WE ARE AND WHAT WE WANT, then eliminating all the other wish roles and sticking to that one program.

Can you be settled and happy? Sure you can—IF YOU REALLY WANT TO BE AND WILL WORK AT THE JOB. You have what it takes. But will you use it? Or can't you cut out your pipe dreams?

ISN'T IT SO?

Life is a game. We run into debt during prosperity and crawl out in adversity.

An assured peace is to be preferred to an expected victory.

for ever.—Psalms, xcii:7.

When the wicked spring as the grass, and when all the workers of iniquity do flourish; it is that they shall be destroyed

Japanese Fighters

Such People Win Wars.

A patriotic French song goes "Mourir pour la Patrie, c'est le sort le plus beau, le plus digne d'envie, etc.," which means "to die for your country is the most beautiful fate, the most worthy of envy."

The French certainly mean it: look how they stood at Verdun. All young men of fighting nations mean it, but few mean it exactly AS THE JAPANESE mean it. The picture at the left proves it.

The three Japanese soldiers, crawling along the ground, to avoid being shot, and killed, before their work was accomplished, carried with them a long bomb filled with powerful explosives, the fuse lighted, and will long be known in Japanese history as "The Human Bombs" of Shanghai.

You see the barbed wire entanglements which the Chinese had erected. It was important for the Japanese to go through. If they did it by man-power, cutting the wire by hand, hundreds would be shot down, so volunteers were called for and the job for them is illustrated in the picture.

AND THAT IS EXACTLY WHAT THEY DID.

Whatever you may think of the Japanese-Chinese war, and its rights and wrongs, which no American can possibly decide, you will look with admiration upon these three members of a Sappers Corps.

There was not the slightest chance for the three men to save themselves, by lighting the bomb and running. They were fastened to the bomb that it might not slip from their grasp, and as you see them crawling along, they are going to voluntary death, exchanging life for glory.

THREE HUMAN BOMBS.

"The highest and noblest monument of war was erected near Shanghai by the Three Human Bombs at Miaohangchen. At dawn on March 22, 1932, in a general attack on Miaohangchen a certain Japanese Division, which marched from Woosung, encountered great obstacles through the stubborn resistance of the Chinese troops, which, firmly entrenched, defied the fierce onset of the Imperial Army. The Chinese soldiers raised strong defense works there during a month. A way had to be cut through these deadly obstacles for the Imperial troops. Three heroes of a Japanese sappers' corps fastened to themselves a firing bomb three meters long and jumped into the wire entanglements. The bomb exploded with a loud detonation, smashing the three heroes and the barbed wire to pieces. These heroes died a desperate death, opening a way for the infantrymen to make a dash, which eventually resulted in the occupation of the enemy's camp. Their heroism makes even demons cry."

Local Government Reform Urged on Roosevelt

By James T. Williams, Jr.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT is getting appeals from all over the United States to raise up a Federal leadership for the reorganization of state and local governments north, east, south and west.

Unless this reorganization is soon undertaken by the several states, the whole system of public education will be put in jeopardy, police protection will decrease instead of increase, and other essential state activities will be curtailed because of lack of funds to finance them.

Thousands of millions of dollars of the peoples' money are being thrown away today by politicians to pay the salaries and other expense of state and local officials no longer needed to transact public business.

Education Imperiled By Lack of Funds

MISSOURI is one of many states where the very existence of public education is imperiled by lack of funds with which to pay the teachers and the other operating expenses of the schools.

A recent report to the National Council of State Superintendents and Commissioners of Education by Dr. Charles A. Lee, state superintendent of education in Missouri, vividly describes the plight that has overtaken public education in that commonwealth.

More than 1,000 rural schools in Missouri will be compelled to close long before the school term ends. Three-fifths of all the high schools of the state are in the same predicament.

The number of teachers employed in Missouri today is 1,000 less than were employed in the school year 1930-31. The salaries of some teachers have been cut 60 per cent below the 1929-30 level, and the average reduction for the state is 30 per cent.

At a county teachers' meeting in Missouri recently, when the question was asked of the teachers present how many would receive this year a salary of $600, not one hand was raised in the affirmative.

The politicians of Missouri and many other states can find the money with which to pay the salaries of state and local officials no longer required, but they can not or will not find the money to pay their teachers a living wage or to provide every child in the state with a seat in a well-equipped public school.

Appeal Is Made For Federal Aid

THE only remedy for this desperate situation which many state and local politicians have thus far offered is an appeal to the federal government for federal funds with which to keep the public schools of their states open.

There is a limit to the number of billions which the federal government can lend or give to the states for the support of state activities. If the federal government should take over tomorrow the support of public education throughout the State of Missouri, a dozen other states of the Union the day after tomorrow would demand the same assistance.

What the federal government can do is to recommend, for those states which request it, competent experts in the art of government to make a survey of state and local governments. Such a survey will show what Mr. Roosevelt calls "an obsolete system of government built up in the days of the ox cart" can be reorganized and simplified to meet the needs of the people in the days of the automobile.

Federal leadership to this end is probably the most helpful response President Roosevelt can make to his fellow citizens in many states, who are appealing to him to help them keep open the doors of the public schools that the children of the nation may be given the education which is the birthright of every American.

MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

Marriage A-La-Carte

"If you are a Bohemian," says Mary Borden, author of "The Technique of Marriage," "you had better not marry."

And then Miss Borden goes on to describe the ideal American home, in which all is order and neatness, husbands and wives dress for dinner, EVERY day, and all the meals are social ceremonies.

That may be the ideal home for 75 out of 100 people. But it's rather sad to think of a "home," in which "dunking" would be regarded as a major crime and where no woman could come down to dinner on a hot August evening in her flowered house-pajamas.

Well personally, I should be bored to death with that sort of "home;" so would any man I'd like. Most men hate a picky woman or a finicky woman; and lots of men are vagabonds at heart, and prefer a wife with a touch of Bohemianism in her nature. They don't WANT to be "disciplined!"

* * *

Why can't we each and all have the sort of husbands and homes we want? And why, just because a woman prefers Vagabondia to a home run on boarding-school principles or prefers painting, music, writing or business to struggling with pots and pans and servant-problems, should she be condemned to eternal celibacy or the uncertainties of free-love?

A vagabond woman and a vagabond man can have a very gay and interesting life together. Even being married to each other can't take ALL the color and inspiration and light-heartedness out of their romance.

There are too many varieties of marriage, today, for it to be standardized and poured into a mold, like fancy ice-cream or old-fashioned jelly.
